Thomas Says Court Would Void House's Pay-Hour Bill

Parleys May Lean To Flexible Rates

Slate Clearing, June 11 Brightens as Date of Adjournment.

By Sidney Olson

Grave doubt of the constitutionality of the House version of the wage-hour bill was expressed yesterday by Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, Senate Labor Committee chairman.

Thomas, head of the seven Senate conferees who will seek to write flexible differentials into the rigid House measure, said:

"While the Senate measure, setting up jurisdictional wage-hour standards, is of unquestioned constitutionality, the House bill might be struck down in the Supreme Court on the 'due process' clause of the fifth amendment.

"Constitutionality of any wage-hour measure is certain to be attacked by some industries anyway. It is essential that we draft the soundest possible bill."

As Thomas urged an elastic bill permitting separate industries to obtain "necessary exemptions," Speaker Bankhead prepared to name a seven-man House conference committee, with probably three of its members favoring flexibility.

House Group Split.

House members expected to be named include Chairman Norton, of the Labor Committee, and Representatives Ramspeck, of Georgia; Keller, of Illinois; Dunn, of Pennsylvania, and Wood, of Missouri (Democrats), and Representatives Welch, of California, and Hartley, of New Jersey (Republicans.)

A final decision may be reached by Bankhead today, following a conference with Representative Norton, who is ill.

Keller and Dunn voted with Representative Ramspeck in the House committee for an elastic measure with a "weighted average" floor for wages. Wood will be an American Federation of Labor spokesman on the group and Mrs. Norton is expected to go along with Administration wishes. Norton, Wood, Welch and Hartley voted for the rigid House bill.

If this group is named, it will leave the seven-man Senate committee almost unanimously in favor of more flexible wage-hour standards than the House bill now carries, and House conferees nearly evenly divided on that score.

Ellender to Hold Out.

Differential advocates are expected to put forward as a basis of compromise a little-known section of Mrs. Norton's original bill, that was discarded by her committee. It would empower the Secretary of Labor on petition of an employer and an adequate showing of need, to suspend in the petitioning in-

Tolley Charges 'Distortion' in Attack on AAA

Hits Industrial Criticisms as Imperilling Farm-Business Relations.

Critical analysis of the 1938 farm act by the National Industrial Conference Board yesterday drew a charge of "gross misrepresentation" from H. R. Tolley, AAA administrator.

Tolley accused the board of "specific distortion or misstatement of fact about the agricultural adjustment act" in a conference board bulletin published April 12.

Denying the act gives arbitrary powers to the Secretary of Agriculture, or provides "unlimited" spending, the AAA administrator declared the board's statements might seriously injure "good relations between business and agriculture, so important to both."

Tolley's defense of the farm act, and his attack on the board's analysis, came as the law was under fire in Congress itself and a subject of protest in many farm communities.

Tolley said the analysis, signed by Robert F. Martin, of the division of economic research, "contains departures from fact that are numerous and very wide."

To the board's statement that "the 'new charter for agriculture' might as aptly be called a new charter for the Secretary of Agriculture, for the power to dictate and control the practices of each farmer in the United States is vested in him, practically without check," Tolley replied in a letter to the board:

"The act invests the Secretary with no such power. It prescribes what acts he shall perform and how he shall perform them, in greater detail than has any previous piece of general farm legislation."

Tolley also took exception to the board's statement that Wallace can draw from the Treasury for farm

Two Mystery Planes Again 'Raid' Japan

High-Flying Scout Craft Cruise Along West Kyushu Coast.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), May 31.—Western Japan was "blacked out" for three hours last night and early today as protection against two mysterious airplanes, believed to be Chinese, which cruised along the entire western coast of the Island of Kyushu.

The craft apparently dropped neither bombs nor leaflets. It was Japan's second "bloodless air raid" in ten days. Chinese planes on May 20 dropped leaflets on a 2,500-mile round-trip flight from Hankow.

Japanese authorities were mystified and worried over the raid, fearing it might presage a mass attack. They appeared more alarmed than if the planes actually had dropped bombs.

State of Alarm.

Western air defense headquarters declared a state of alarm at 10:50 p. m., (8:50 a. m., E. S. T.), and did not end it until 1:45 o'clock this morning (11:45 a. m., Monday, E. S. T.). It was effective over Kyushu, westernmost island of Japan proper, and also over Yamaguchi prefecture, at the western end of Honshu, Japan's main island, and part of Korea, Japanese colony on the mainland.

Coming from the south, the planes first flew over Kagoshima, at the southern end of Kyushu. Then they flew north as far as Fukuoka and Moji, at the island's northwestern tip. Then they disappeared.

With the warning from air defense headquarters, all traffic in the affected areas was stopped. All lights were put out.

Raiders Avoid Carriers.

It was not stated whether Japanese fliers pursued the mysterious invaders, who flew extremely high.

The "raiders" took a sea route from the south, thus avoiding airplane carriers in the east China Sea and big Japanese air bases on the northwestern coast of Kyushu.

If the planes were Chinese, the flight marked the third time Chinese craft had invaded Japan and her island colony of Formosa. On February 23 Chinese planes bombed Taihoku and other Formosan cities, killing 8 and wounding 29.

In the second raid, on May 20, Chinese craft from Hankow dropped leaflets on the area around Nagasaki, Kyushu Port and Sasebo, big naval base.

The leaflets, which fluttered down from powerful American-made (Martin) bombers, urged the Japanese people to throw off the military domination blamed for the invasion of China.

Great Battle Impending.

Shanghai, Tuesday, May 31 (U.P.).—Chinese armies totaling more than 1,000,000 men were drawn up along the Lunghai Railroad today as Gen. Chiang Kai-shek threw the pick of his Central Government troops into a showdown battle to save Hankow, the temporary Chinese capital.

The key point in the impending battle, which Japanese predicted would be "the bloodiest of the war," was expected to be between

Adm. Shoemaker Dies at 75; Directed World War Convoys

Rear Admiral William Rawle Shoemaker, 75, retired, who directed the United States battleship convoy during the World War, died yesterday at the Mare Island Navy Yard Hospital, Vallejo, Calif., he Associated Press reported.

SHOEMAKER.

Admiral Shoemaker retired as chief of the Navy Bureau of Navigation in 1927, following a brilliant career which spanned three major American military campaigns. A resident of San Francisco since retirement, he had been ill nearly a year.

Admiral Shoemaker held the distinguished service medal for the feat of directing the war-time convoys. He also held the Navy Cross for his participation in an advisory capacity in other naval activities during the World War.

Known through the service for his command of the theory and practice of strategy, Admiral Shoemaker twice had charge of war plans, from 1912 to 1914, and again from 1923 to 1924. As a young officer he received two assignments as instructor at the Naval Academy. Shortly before the war he lectured at the Naval War College on strategy in the Pacific.

He established the aviation course at the Naval Academy, and the graduate aviation courses at the

A plea for strong national defense as "the best and perhaps the only assurance of peace" was voiced by Senator David I. Cheered by the thousands who filled the sun-flooded amphitheater, Senator Walsh expressed the hope that "our children and our children's children may be spared the horrors and the tortures of war, which it was the lot of those who are buried here to endure."

The chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee stressed his conviction that the new Navy program is not designed for an offensive war. "But agencies of defense we most certainly must have, and strong agencies, so strong that no

$10,000 Fire Halts Bridge Players in Chevy Chase Home

A bridge game at 406 Shepherd street, Chevy Chase, Md., was abruptly broken up yesterday when neighbors notified the players that smoke was pouring from the roof above them.

While flames shot up 20 feet from the blazing attic, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Stevens and two guests removed household effects and clothing from the two-story frame building. The attic was destroyed.

Firemen from the Chevy Chase engine house and the Bethesda volunteer department, who answered the alarm, said the blaze might have been caused by defective wiring. Fire and water damage to the house and furniture was estimated at $10,000.

Senate Given Bill to 'Draft' Funds in War

Military Committee Would Compel Loans From All Possessors of $1,000.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee made public yesterday a report approving legislation which would compel everyone having net wealth of $1,000 or more to lend money to the Government in wartime.

Overriding objections raised by the War, Navy and Treasury Departments, the committee recommended the measure to the Senate with this statement:

"The surest way to prevent this country from being drawn into a future war is to draft money as well as manpower.

"When the financial tycoons and large manufacturers realize that they will have to lend the bulk of the money necessary to finance the next war at an extremely low rate of interest, they will hesitate to use the forces at their command to propagandize the general public into a war hysteria."

Senator Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma, is the author of the legislation.

Briefly, the bill provides that in event of a war of sufficient moment to require an increase in the military establishment by the drafting of manpower, the President would order a census of the wealth of the Nation, requiring each citizen to register and file a sworn financial

Czechs Draft All for War, From 6 to 60

Reich's Plane Protests End in Expansion of 'No Man's Land.'

By the Associated Press.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, May 30. Czechoslovakia tonight decreed some form of military or defensive service for her entire population between the ages of 6 and 60.

The war-born republic, which fears dismemberment at the hands of Germany and other encircling neighbors, published three military training decrees with a series of new regulations based on the stringent defense training law enacted last year.

The move came shortly after the Praha government made a conciliatory gesture toward Germany by limiting activities of Czechoslovakia air pilots in border regions.

[British official quarters tonight received reports Czechoslovakia is withdrawing her troops from the frontier region near the junction of Czech, Austrian and Hungarian territory near Bratislava, the United Press said.

Boys, Girls Both Included.

[These reports, if true, indicated to British observers the beginning of Prague's general plans to gradually eliminate the Czech show of force along the frontiers to pave the way for negotiations on a plan of lasting appeasement.—Editor's note.]

Compulsory military training was specified by the decrees for all children over 6 with the exception of those who normally would be exempt from physical training.

Boys not attending school are required now to devote 70 hours annually to military training until they are 17, and thereafter 90 hours annually until they enter military service.

Girls must devote 40 hours annually to first aid and air defense training until the age of 21, and thereafter 30 hours annually until the age of 30.

Arrests in Vienna Held Reprisal for N.Y. War on Nazis

Vienna, May 30 (U.P.).—Vienna's Jews were thrown into panic tonight by fast-spreading rumors that Nazi authorities had arrested thousands of Jews in a wholesale round-up in retaliation for anti-German activity among Jewish refugees in New York.

A United Press correspondent, attempting to run down the rumors, learned that a group of Jews, variously estimated at between a few hundred and 3,000, had been arrested in the Vienna area as part of a new Nazi campaign of cross-examination.

The Jewish panic coincided with deepening mystery over the whereabouts of Kurt Schuschnigg, deposed chancellor of Austria, when it was disclosed that officers of the Nazi secret police had removed him from his Belvedere estate despite an official announcement that he is still there.

Ransom Note Asks $10,000; Father Tries Quick Contact

Five-Year-Old Snatched From His Bedroom at Town of Princeton.

Hoover Expected to Quit Northern Case Today and Rush South.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Miami, Fla. (Tuesday), May 31. Authorities disclosed today that 5½-year-old James Bailey Cash, jr., had been kidnaped from his bed at Princeton, 25 miles south of Miami, and two ransom notes were left behind demanding $10,000 for his return.

The kidnaping was reported as G-men hunted the kidnapers of Peter Levine, whose body was found yesterday.

The boy's parents and agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who were called into the case immediately, refused to give out any information besides to confirm that the child was missing.

The child reportedly disappeared within the space of an hour Saturday night while the mother was at a nearby general store and filling station owned by the Cashes, helping her husband count the day's receipts before closing.

Two Notes Found.

Two notes were said to have been found by the Cashes demanding a $10,000 ransom for the child's return. One of the notes reportedly contained direction to a meeting place for a ransom contact, which Cash was said to have been attempting to establish tonight.

Although G-Men were playing an active role in the case, it was reported they would not interfere with Cash's attempt to negotiate with the abductors. A plane-load of special agents were said to have arrived here yesterday.

Reports from New York said that J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was to leave by plane for Florida tomorrow.

Taken From Bedroom.

It was said that the child was taken from a rear bedroom in the Cash home, shortly after the mother left him at 9.30 p. m. Saturday. She had put him to bed at 9 and read the comics to him until he fell asleep.

Neighbors living above the Cashes were quoted as saying they heard noises from the bedroom below, but thought it was the child's parents moving about.

Levine Killers' Boat Sought.

By the Associated Press.

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 30.—After an all-night study of geodetic charts of Long Island Sound, police and Federal agents, headed by J. Edgar Hoover, G-man chief, decided today the headless battered body of 12-year-old Peter Levine, kidnaped February 24 from his home here, had been dropped at sea, either from a row boat or a yacht.

So today, as the Levine family held brief and private funeral services for the boy, the detectives concentrated on an intensive check of all boat houses in this vicinity. As to suspects, they admitted reluctantly there were none.

The search was one of double purpose, for besides checking boats and their owners, other squads of detectives searched the sound for the boy's head, hands and feet, all missing when his wire-trussed body was washed ashore last night on Davenport Neck, only three miles from his home. Ideal in Peril, Gettysburg Cry Of Vandenberg

Preserve Lincoln's Aims, Senator Pleads at Battle-Field Rites.

By the Associated Press.

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30.—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, addressing a Memorial Day throng of thousands on this historic battlefield, warned today that the Nation faces "another Gettysburg."

The Michigan Senator said this time "the crisis is civil—not military."

Vandenberg delivered the Nation's tribute to those who died at Gettysburg 75 years ago amid surroundings bristling with preparations for a final reunion of the Union and Confederate soldiers, June 29 to July 6.

Where Lincoln Stood.

Vandenberg spoke from a platform close to the marble monument where Lincoln stood when he told a war-weary audience that the conflict was being fought to test whether this Nation, or any nation "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal," could long endure.

The Senator's address climaxed a day of colorful activity on the 25-mile preserve, hallowed by the thousands of Union and Confederate soldiers who gave their lives in battle.

A mile-long procession marched to the National Cemetery for the ceremonies, led by school children and a car containing Adams County's four Union survivors.

The crowd, estimated at 6,500, heard Vandenberg declare that the Constitution must be preserved to "safeguard Lincoln's pledge and democracy."

"Treason to Gettysburg."

"One present breach in the dike of the Constitution—inconsequential though it may seem at the moment—can loose the final flood," he asserted.

"If the Constitution needs change, it can properly be changed only by the people themselves. Any other change is treason — treason to American inheritance and treason to Gettysburg—treason to Memorial Day."

Earlier in the day, 500 Adams County school children decorated the hundreds of marble headstones in the National Cemetery with red and white roses.

Seventieth Memorial Day.

Across the Nation—on the hallowed battlefields of Gettysburg and Antietam, in tree-shaded country towns and great metropolitan centers—tens of thousands of Americans yesterday observed the seventieth annual Memorial Day in homage to men who died on the field of battle.

In New York, only 12 Civil War veterans—the oldest 96, the youngest 90, with a combined age total of 1,107 years—marched with faltering step on Riverside Drive. Two others, too enfeebled by age to join their comrades, watched from the reviewing stand. Last year there were 15.

Mme. Julia Cantacuzene, of Washington, granddaughter of Gen. U. S. Grant, participated in the parade services.

In Ohio, the State acted to make certain there will be no forgotten veterans' graves. Carl Watson, Ohio administrator, said 600 WPA workers would devote the next six months plotting the locations of an estimated 300,000 veterans' graves, financed by $461,000 in Federal funds and $22,960 in State funds.

the main Teruel-Sagunto-Valencia highway, 8 miles to the south.

The insurgent offensive came as a lightning stroke after one of their cavalry units was defeated by a small government force on the south side of the highway at La Clavela Hill, 16 miles southeast of Teruel and 55 miles northwest of Valencia.

Insurgent bombers and artillerymen kept up relentless attacks today on coastal Valencia, the strategically important town of Sagunto, north of Valencia, and Madrid.

Insurgents' planes made six air raids on Valencia during the day, concentrating on the port where one French sailor was killed and three British seamen were wounded.

The French sailor lost his life aboard the French steamer Djem, which was set afire by the attack. The blaze was extinguished by dock firemen.

The three Britons, crew men of the steamer Thurston, were running for refuge when struck. One of them, with both legs broken, was not expected to live.

The suburbs of Grao and Cabanal also were bombed.

Sagunto, on the important Eastern Seaboard highway between Valencia and Barcelona, suffered one of the worst bombardments of the more than 500 it has received since January 1.

No casualties were reported, but the stricken town is now almost leveled.

other nations will dare make war upon us," he declared.

Speaking over a national radio hookup as well as to the local veterans and out-of-town visitors, Walsh warned of the dangers confronting American principles.

"Today among most of the nations of the world the democracy for which our heroes died is but a word, a mere term to cloak every political principle that is the antithesis of democracy," he said.

In the light of world events, he pointed out, living veterans "who 20 years ago left the firing lines of France must not think that your battles are over."

He urged them to mobilize in a war against such foes of democracy as "social and industrial injustice; racial and class hatred; religious prejudice; monopolistic practices that enhance the cost of living, lessen the purchasing power of wages and increase the already too great disparity in living conditions between the rich and the poor, and the possession of the country's resources by a limited few."

Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, meanwhile declared in a radio address peace would come only "when the peoples of the earth become strongly enough convinced they want no more war."

He expressed confidence that ultimately the nations will prevent war by means of a system of cooperation.

Massing of Colors.

After the massing of the colors by the American Legion's National Guard of Honor, the Rev. Dr. John F. B. Carruthers, of California, past department chaplain of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, delivered the invocation.

He prayed for a rebirth of the "sacramental spirit of Christian soldiers in the warfare of our day, so that there shall not be another field of crosses row on row in Flanders Field, no fratricidal civil and industrial strife and never more in all the world the Crucified Christ of No Man's Land."

Music at the service was provided by Mario Cozzi, Metropolitan Opera baritone; the Marine Band, and the drum and bugle corps of the Fort Stevens Post, American Legion. James G. Yaden, president of the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, read a greeting from Department Commander John M. Kline of the G. A. R., who was unable to attend because of illness.

Gen. Logan Honored.

Earlier in the day representatives of the 150 patriotic societies participating in the service gathered around the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier for their annual wreath-laying ceremony. President Roosevelt's wreath was placed at the head of the tomb by Maj. Horace B. Smith, White House aide.

Also honored with an individual service was Gen. John A. Logan, who in 1868, as commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, ordered the establishment of Memorial Day. Ceremonies were held in Arlington Cemetery by the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War and in Soldiers' Home Cemetery by the National Women's Relief Corps, G. A. R.

Gen. Logan's daughter, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, was honor guest at exercises held at the Battle Ground National Cemetery in Brightwood by the G. A. R. and the Brightwood Citizens Association. Senator Theodore F. Green, of Rhode Island, delivered the address, and school children decorated the graves of 41 Union soldiers killed at Fort Stevens in Brightwood during the Civil War.

In a service at Georgetown Law School, a bronze tablet was unveiled in memory of university students who died during the World War.

Services sponsored by the George E. Kileen Post, No. 25, of the American Legion, marked a community observance of Memorial Day in the churchyard of the Grace Episcopal Church in Georgetown.

Principal address of the day was made by Joseph J. Malloy, national executive committeeman of the District Department of the Legion. Fred Money delivered the address of welcome during the services, while Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, department president of the legion's auxiliary, made the response.

Other speakers included Archie Haycock, John Hadley Doyle and Milton Korman. The Rev. M. M. Perkins conducted the invocation and Mrs. Jean H. Waters sang "Taps."

President Sees Reorganization Leaders Today

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 30.—President Roosevelt wound up three days of rest and recreation at home tonight and headed back to the White House for a conference tomorrow morning with Congressional leaders.

The President's reorganization program probably will be one of the topics discussed at that meeting, to be attended by Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leaders Barkley and Rayburn of the Senate and House.

The Congressional leaders are expected to report to Mr. Roosevelt on the possibility of enactment of the three phases of the program passed by the House: Providing for six administrative assistants to the President, re-enactment of certain reorganization powers given the President in 1933, and creation of a new department of public welfare—which, if created, Harry Hopkins, the Works Progress administrator, is expected to head.

Stalled in Senate.

Bills containing these provisions were passed by the House before the angry debate which ended in defeat of the Senate-approved bill containing Mr. Roosevelt's whole reorganization program.

Another matter on which the leaders were expected to report was Congressional reaction to the President's speech Friday on taxes at Arthurdale, W. Va. Chairman Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, already has assailed Mr. Roosevelt's criticism of revisions of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes.

Following the meeting with the Congressional leaders, the President arranged tentatively to confer with Secretaries Morgenthau and Wallace and Administrator Hopkins. The subject of that conference was not disclosed.

Tours His Farm.

The last thing the President did today before dining and boarding his special train for Washington was to ride over his farmlands.

Earlier in the day he drove to Rhinebeck, up the Hudson River from here, and approved plans for the new $16,000 postoffice there. His aides announced that bids for the new building would be advertised by the Treasury tomorrow.

The structure is to follow the general outline of a 1½-story farmhouse, which Hendrik Kip, a Dutch settler, built in 1700 at Rhinebeck and will contain part of the original Kip homestone.

James Roosevelt, son and secretary to the President, went from Hyde Park to New York tonight for a dental examination. He has just returned from Mayo Brothers Clinic at Rochester, Minn., where a general physical examination disclosed the presence of gastric ulcers.

statement of his total net wealth.

The Government would determine the amount of money necessary to meet the emergency, and would issue a like amount of bonds in various denominations. Each person having net wealth of $1,000 or more would be required to buy the bonds, in amounts determined by a schedule included in the bill. The bonds would run for 50 years and bear interest not to exceed 1 per cent. The income from them would not be tax exempt, and the Government could pay them off at will.

The schedule of bond purchases which would be required ranges from 5 per cent of net wealth from $1,000 to $10,000 to 75 per cent of net wealth above $100,000,000.

The committee contended that arguments of the War and Navy Departments, favoring voluntary public financial support in national emergencies, would be just as applicable against the selective draft system for manpower.

The Treasury's objection to the proposal, on the ground that it would be difficult to define net wealth, was "about as thin as soup made from the shadow of a pigeon's wing that died of starvation," the committee declared.

It added the legislation would "establish the simple, though thus far unaccepted, principle that dollars are no more valuable than the blood or the life of a mother's son."

Most members of Congress agreed that, because of the Government department's opposition, there was little chance of further action on the bill at this session.

Railway Labor Executives Indorse Senators Reynolds and Nye in Primary Races.

Two Senators who face primary battles for renomination within a week, have received the indorsement of the Railway Labor Executives Association, composed of heads of unions representing more than 1,000,000 railroad workers.

REYNOLDS.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, faces the voters on Saturday of this week and is being opposed by Representative Frank Hancock. Both are running as supporters of President Roosevelt. Reynolds is indorsed by the rail labor heads.

The association, despite its kindly feeling to the Administration, finds itself lined up against Relief Administrator Hopkins, who has sought to aid Representative Otha D. Wearin against Senator Guy Gillette, of Iowa. The rail labor men already had indorsed Gillette before Hopkins announced his stand.

The association also is backing Senator Gerald Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, against Gov. William Langer in that State's primaries on June 20.

The nomination of Harry Slattery to be Undersecretary of the Interior was approved yesterday by the Senate Public Lands Committee. Texas Congressmen are being kept busy with home delegations here to obtain Government concessions.

While one group arrived from the Lone Star State yesterday to seek diligently to have the proposed Federal Cotton Research laboratory located there, another reached the Capital from West Texas intent on getting a new air-mail route from San Antonio to Amarillo.

Representatives Maverick, South, Mahon, Garrett and Jones, whose districts would be served by the new line, will accompany the Texans to confer today with Second Assistant Postmaster General Harllee Branch.

Thomas Fears House Pay Bill Violates 'Due Process' Clause

dustry any fixed wage minimum above 25 cents on hour.

Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, one of the two Southern Democrats added at the last minute to the Senate conferees, declared yesterday he would "hold out as long as it is humanly possible for wage differentials fixed by some Federal agency" rather than uniform wage minimums frozen into law. He added: "But of course I'm a good Democrat, and I will not obstruct legislation."

Ellender declared that "wage-fixing by Congress" proposed in the House bill "would mean the ultimate destruction of labor unions and the principle of collective bargaining."

"From that moment you wouldn't have any use for labor unions or collective bargaining," he said. "Congress would be the wage-fixing agency and instead of economics being the guding factor, it would be politics."

Arguing that the Administration itself is in favor of elasticity, Ellender quoted the words of the President in his message January 3: "No reasonable person seeks a complete uniformity in wages in every part of the United States."

Representative Ramspeck also declared that "a rigid type of bill undoubtedly will tend to destroy labor unions as they now exist."

"The chief purpose of a labor union is to get better wages and hours and working conditions," said Ramspeck. "If they are to be regulated by statute, they can only be changed by political action instead of economic pressure. The only thing left for labor unions would be to engage in politics."

Due Process Theory Cited.

Chairman Thomas, of the Senate conferees, explained that "the House bill sets rigid standards, beginning at 25 cents per hour and graduating to 40 cents an hour in three years, and starting with a 44-hour workweek, which steps down to 40 hours in two years.

"Suppose in some area the labor standard is as low as 10 cents an hour. The law would jump this at once to 25 cents an hour, very possibly driving the employer out of business. He might legally complain to the courts that his property had been taken without due process of law, according to numerous established precedents of the Supreme Court of the United States."

The Senate bill sets up a Fair Labor Standards Board to administer the law, with the board empowered to make studies of local conditions before imposing minimum wages and maximum hours. The board would be a separate quasi-judicial agency, and Thomas pointed out yesterday that the Supreme Court has never struck down such an anegcy to which Congress had delegated its powers.

The House bill vests administration in the Department of Labor, but the problem there under the House bill would be one of enforcement without discretion, it was pointed out.

Both chambers were in recess yesterday, with the House membership really relaxed, as their calendar is practically clean. All the House has to do is to whip through the final deficiency bill and then wait for the wage-hour conference report.

The Senate reconvenes facing a bitter-end battle by conservative Senators to earmark funds for specific purposes in the President's $3,247,000,000 recovery bill. Some of them admitted privately yesterday that the measure will pass without substantial amendment, but the fight will continue under the debate limitation which Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, obtained Saturday. Under the limitation, any Senator may speak for 30 minutes on the bill and not more than 15 minutes on an amendment.

Barkley said yesterday, "We will pass the relief bill in the Senate by the middle of the week. Then all we will have left will be a compromise on the wage-hour bill, a deficiency appropriation measure and a few odds and ends that can be sandwiched in at any time."

Definite abandonment of attempts to revive the Government reorganization bill for this session was revealed yesterday, coinciding with reports that the President will try to get the legislation passed again next year.

Home-hungry members of both houses, eager for the breakaway, have been visibly chafing at the bit throughout the past week, as reports seep back here that their political fences are being torn apart by electioneering foes in their districts. Sudden adjournment, even by the June 11 date tentatively set by Barkley, may result.

Stunt Camera Aids Mountain Mapping

New York, May 30 (AP).—Invention of a "slant-eyed" camera which measures mountains from the air was reported today by the American Geographical Society. It takes all its pictures at a tilted angle instead of straight down.

It has shown, among other things, the society stated, that reports of a chain of mountains in northern Labrador higher than the mile-tall summits of New Hampshire's Mount Washington and North Carolina's Mount Mitchell are untrue.

Pa. Girl, 3, Falls Into Well at Play And Is Drowned

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Flinistone, Md., May 30.—Shirley Louise Bennett, 3, fell in a well and drowned while playing near her home at Chaneyville, Pa., just over the State line.

Bill to Protect State Workers In Tax Ruling

Sen. Green Would Preclude Retroactive Income Payments.

Senator Theodore F. Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island and a staunch supporter of the Administration, yesterday announced action would be taken to eliminate possibility of 12-year retroactive income tax liability placed over city and State employes by a Supreme Court decision.

SEN. GREEN.

He said he would introduce a bill to that effect, in view of the high court's ruling last week that salaries of officials of the Port of New York Authority are subject to the Federal levy.

'Protection Is Sought.'

The decision had created consternation among thousands of city and State employes, who were advised that technically they might be found liable for income tax levies and penalties covering the past 12 years. Today and tomorrow, attorney generals of 11 States are scheduled to meet here to work out with Treasury officials some way of protecting the public employes, who, believing themselves exempt from the Federal levy, filed incomplete or no income tax returns.

Green's statement said:

"When I read this decision, I could see no way to prevent gross injustice being done to such employes unless Congress passed some law providing that what is in effect new law, enacted by the Supreme Court and not by Congress, should be amended by the Congress so as to apply only to the future and not the past. All these hundreds of thousands of public employes had the moral right to rely on the construction of the Constitution exempting them from taxation previously enunciated by the Supreme Court. The majority of them must be wondering whether they will have to pay Federal income taxes in the future, and all of them must be wondering whether the Government will not, in enforcing the law, be obliged to call upon them to pay Federal income taxes for the past, at least since 1926. In that event they will not only have to pay those income taxes, but also interest and in many cases penalties either for not filing a return or for not filing a correct return. This certainly in many cases will result not only injustice, but in disaster to most of the employes.

* * * *

Cites "Legislative" Action.

"I am not criticizing the Supreme Court for its change of interpretation of the Constitution. Its action, however, is an excellent illustration of the legislative functions sometimes exercised by the court. The law was one way until the court rendered its decision a week ago. Since then the law has been the opposite. The legislative branch of the Government has had nothing to do with this change. Yet we hear little of the encroachments of the court on the functions of the Congress."

Green, who recently was a guest of the President on a Potomac cruise said he expected enactment of his bill before adjournment of Congress, which leaders are trying to bring about by June 11. No opposition is expected from Treasury officials, who have indicated that they had no desire to apply the broad implications harshly to employes of State agencies. Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson has expressed a similar view.

The Treasury's policy, however, will not be crystallized, it was indicated, until after the Wednesday conference with the State attorneys general. The attorneys general of New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Massachusetts, Maine and Delaware are expected to attend.

22 Regional Champions Compete for $500 1st Prize Here.

Twenty-two regional spelling champions, ranging from 11 to 15 years, today will meet at the auditorium of the New National Museum, Tenth street and Constitution avenue, in the finals of the fourteenth annual national spelling bee.

The spellers, selected from nearly 2,000,000 grade school pupils who entered the competition, last night abandoned their books with a banquet at the Hotel Hamilton.

Winner of the match today, scheduled for 9:30 a. m., will receive $500, while rewards for the other contestants scale down to $35 for the last two places. Contest officials estimated the spelling bee would last more than four hours, with the final portion of the match scheduled for broadcast from 1 p. m. to 1:30 p. m. over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Youngest entrant in the finals is Bettie Ashton, 11, of Orange, Va., winner of the State contest.

Among the words which have decided the contest in former years are gladiolus, knack, luxuriance, abrogate, asceticism, foulard, interchangeably, propitiatory, deteriorate, interning, predilection and plebeian.

'Rattlesnake Derby' Planned in Arkansas

North Little Rock, Ark., May 30 (AP).—Joe K. Poch, sponsor, said today a "rattlesnake derby" will highlight this town's July 4 festivities. Poch said he expected 500 entries to compete for $250 in cash prizes.

The sponsor said the handlers would have to catch their own entries.

British Stand on Oil Laid to Royal Dutch

London, May 30 (AP).—Leading British oil brokers today said they believed the Royal Dutch Shell oil combine, fearful of losing extensive oil properties in Venezuela, was exerting pressure to maintain Britain's firm stand against Mexican expropriation of her foreign-owned oil industry.

A boycott of Mexican oil was reported to have been ordered by Shell, with a threat of refusing to have any future dealings with any concern which ships, purchases or otherwise handles Mexican oil.

Jury Is Completed To Try 5 Policemen

Bartow, Fla., May 30 (AP).—Selection of a criminal court jury of six men to try a second time five former Tampa policemen convicted in 1936 of kidnaping Eugene F. Poulnot was completed late today. The State Supreme Court granted the defendants new trials.

Poulnot, Sam D. Rogers and Joseph Shoemaker were seized outside the Tampa police station where they had been questioned about alleged communistic activities. Forced into automobiles, the three men were removed to a secluded spot, flogged and tarred. Shoemaker died a few days later.

Tolley Charges 'Distortion' In Attack on 1938 Farm Act

payments "as much money as he thinks is required." He said spending "of only such funds as may be appropriated by Congress for its execution" is authorized.

He took issue with the bulletin's assertion that the ever-normal granary plan would be carried out "by a supreme intelligence instead of by uncertain free-market forces as in the past." Tolley said Wallace must follow known and specified data in calculating supplies and determining acreage. This acreage becomes the national acreage allotment for the crops in question, he said, and "no administrative discretion or arbitrary power in fixing these allotments is permitted to the Secretary of Agriculture."

The AAA administrator further said the board's analysis ignored "the fact that marketing quotas cannot even be offered for the approval of producers in a referendum, except in years when supplies of the commodity in question have reached an excessive level which again is specified in the act itself."

"Guess" Basis Denied.

"The actual fact is," said Tolley, "that the Secretary of Agriculture has no discretionary authority whatever to impose marketing quotas or to revise them downward." He said marketing quota authority given to Wallace "is only power to make operation of the law less rigorous than it otherwise would be."

Tolley's ire also was aroused by the bulletin reference to "a hopelessly complicated formula involving the Department of Agriculture's guess concerning the probable production, the Secretary of Agriculture's decision concerning what is normal supply, and the latest version of the Department of Agriculture's price parity formula."

"The fact is," replied Tolley, "that the act permits the use of no guesses, but of the statistical reports of some 200,000 unpaid, volunteer crop reporters throughout the country, no acreages, crop conditions, prices and other matters."

He said the bulletin "seemingly" distinguished between soil conservation and crop restriction as two different things, whereas "reducing this wasteful and destructive proportion of soil-depleting crops is the first step in soil conservation," and payments to farmers are "quite reasonably conditioned upon their maintaining on their farms a conserving balance between soil-depleting and soil-improving crops and uses."

He said the bulletin attached "some peculiar significance" to mention of the Secretary of Agriculture over 180 times in the act.

He said it was difficult to see how Congress could have avoided "mentioning his title at appropriate points therein."

Fears Effect On Business.

Tolley declared the bulletin lists numerous excerpts which are removed almost entirely from their context "with the natural result of rendering them entirely misleading."

"There still remains," Tolley's letter concluded, "the question of the effect on business of the National Industrial Conference board's action in opposing a national farm program designed to stabilize and safeguard supplies of farm products and to stabilize and improve the income and buying power of farmers who constitute one-fourth of the customers for goods and services produced by the nonagricultural industries of the country."

Anti-War Body Asks New Study Of Arms Trade

Other Peace Measures Proposed; Embargo Repeal Is Sought.

A resolution calling for Congressional investigation of American corporate interests in the munitions industry was adopted yesterday by the National Antiwar Congress at its concluding session at the Rialto Theater.

The resolution was one of several adopted by the more than 1,000 delegates, dealing with national defense, war propaganda, neutrality and the "good neighbor policy."

A Congressional investigation is necessary, speakers declared, "to forestall increasing participation by the United States in a suicidal armament race which American corporate interests are in fact speeding up."

The congress drafted a six-point peace program.

"1. Immediate removal of American ships and marines from belligerent zones and evacuation of American nationals.

"2. No increase in Army or Navy budget.

Back Ludlow War Vote.

"3. Right of citizens to vote on declaration of war.

"4. Abandonment of all existing plans for industrial mobilization.

"5. No alliance with any nation or group for war.

"6. Concentration on the struggle, at home, against injustice, unemployment, bad housing and poverty . . . abroad (for) increasing solidarity with all nations for abolishment of economic injustices and colonial oppression, and to remove the causes of dictatorial militarism."

Spanish Embargo Attacked.

Following an address by Norman Thomas, national chairman of the Socialist Party, urging that the organization go on record as approving the lifting of the Spanish embargo, members voted a resolution condemning the Administration for placing an embargo against Spain as "a violation of the Spanish-American treaty of friendship ratified in 1902."

Other resolutions called for an embargo on the export of arms and war materials and on loans and credits to warring nations; a prohibition on the carrying of belligerent cargoes in American ships; passage of the La Follette-Ludlow amendment for a war referendum; passage of a peacetime arms embargo law, and indorsement of the "good neighbor policy."

Elected as members of the continuing committee of the organization were Dr. John A. Lapp, national chairman of the Keep America Out of War Committee; Norman Thomas, Dorothy Dunbar Bromley, newspaper woman; Bertram Wolfe, writer; Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America; Rose M. Stein, of the Council for Progressive Social Action; Devere Allen, writer; John T. Flynn, economist; Rabbi Philip Bernstein; Allan Knight Chalmers, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle; Jacob Taylor, director of the Rural Life Council, National Council for the Prevention of War, and Theresa Durlach, president of World Peaceways.

Cardenas Seeks To Insure Loyalty Pay Gifts of Land

Mexico City, May 30 (AP).—The Mexican government sought today through land grants to insure loyalty of Gen. Saturnino Cedillo's erstwhile followers in San Luis Potosi State as federal troops continued pursuit of the rebel leader and his fast dwindling force.

Dispatches from San Luis Potosi said 390,000 acres of land had been redistributed in 66 communities, benefiting 39,278 individuals, and that additional grants would be made shortly in 319 more communities affecting an even greater number.

Among the recipients were many of Cedillo's followers who laid down their arms since the revolt started.

The grants were made under supervision of Gabino Vazquez, head of the government agrarian department, who is in San Luis Potosi with President Lazaro Cardenas.

Police Lead Nazis From Town in Pa.

South Canaan, Pa., May 30 (AP).—Six German-American Bund members were escorted from town today by police after they were rushed by pilgrims to St. Tikhon's Russian Orthodox Monastery. The Nazis, including a woman, were dressed in the brown-shirt uniform of the bund and wore swastikas. They were distributing literature.

1,400 Bakery Drivers To Strike in Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, May 30 (AP).—Negotiations between 35 leading bakery concerns and their drivers collapsed tonight, bringing from Ralph E. Thorn, union leader, a statement that a strike of 1,400 drivers at midnight Wednesday was "inevitable."

Such a walkout would paralyze deliveries within Pittsburgh and a radius of 60 miles, the bakery companies declared in an advertisement.

Two Die in Plane Crash.

Cheboygan, Mich., May 30 (AP).—An Ohio airplane pilot and a companion died yesterday when their plane crashed in Mullet Lake.

The victims were Frank Miller, 23, of Ashland, Ohio, owner and pilot of the airplane, and Robert E. Riley, also of Ashland.

May Have Been Garroted.

The possibility that garroting might have been the cause of the lad's death was suggested by Dr. Amos O. Squire, Westchester County medical examiner.

He emphasized, however, it was a conclusion that might never be established, and a long row of other questions that may never be answered stood also before Federal and local investigators.

"I have made out a death certificate certifying death to asphyxiation by drowning—with a large question mark after it," Dr. Squire said.

"I have described it as a homicide and checked the time of death, also with a large question mark, as (sometime in) March, 1938. I had to give the cause of death so the body could be buried—hence the question marks."

"We are examining microscopically the boy's lungs, heart, kidneys, liver, spleen and stomach. I have also preserved parts of the skin, particularly around the neck, for chemical analysis.

"There was a ridge there, possibly caused by some constricting band. (And that constricting band, he said, might have meant strangulation). We are searching diligently for the head because, under instruments, it might tell us many things we would like to know in this story. Failing to find the head, some of our purposes may be defeated."

"In more than 1,000 drowning cases I have never before known the head to be missing."

He added that "from the beginning" he never had believed the boy would be recovered.

"He was precocious," said the doctor, "and a lad of 12 can cause his abductors a lot of trouble."

He added it appeared doubtful that the boy had been sexually abused.

At least one thing appeared highly probable, and that was that his captors kept demanding money long after Peter Levine was dead.

About 55 old friends of the Levines were present at the funeral, during which Mrs. Levine leaned heavily upon her husband's arm. Dr. Henry Newman, leader of the Brooklyn Ethical Society, delivered the funeral address.

There were but two songs, Handel's Largo and Chopin's Funeral March. There was but a single cluster of flowers.

The body was cremated.

A ransom payment of $60,000 had been demanded originally by his kidnapers. It finally was whittled down to $30,000—a sum the father, Murray Levine, a New York City lawyer, stood ready to pay, as he waited sadly for a "contact" that never came.

Baker Leads Howard For Printers' Chief

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30 (U.P.).—Claude M. Baker, of San Francisco, tonight was leading Charles P. Howard, of Chicago, president of the International Typographical Union, in unofficial election returns for union presidency, 33,474 votes to 19,261.

Votes have been tabulated from 515 of the 900 local unions of the I. T. U. About 750 are expected to file returns.

Union Sends Mourners.

The Washington Chapter of the Elevator Construction, Operators and Starters Union will send its executive council to Philadelphia to attend the funeral of Frank Feeney, international president of the union. The funeral will be Wednesday at 8:30 a. m.

hours annual training in civil and air defense.

Military authorities were authorized to erect special training camps for students. Preliminary instruction is to include marksmanship, while more advanced courses will involve training in handling all modern war weapons.

The foreign office informed Ernst Eisenlohr, the German minister, that Czechoslovak military pilots who flew over German territory in the past few days, eliciting German protests, had been punished.

Also, the minister was told, a neutral zone established on the Czechoslavok side of the border to prevent just such incidents has been widened from five kilometers to ten (6 miles). Czechoslovak planes are forbidden to fly over the zone.

(In Berlin the Czechoslovak minister filed countercharges with the German foreign office, charging Reich fliers "on various occasions" had flown over Czechoslovak territory.)

(Stefan Osusky, Czechoslovak minister to Paris, returned from Praha with his government's terms for a full settlement with the pro-Nazi Sudeten German minority of the Sudeten demand for autonomy. Osusky's information was given to the French foreign office, through which it was passed to William C. Bullitt, American ambassador to France.)

Another fortnight of pre-election excitement confronted Czechoslovakia as the results of yesterday's municipal balloting were studied and as party leaders prepared for the third and final round scheduled for Sunday, June 12.

Henlein Victory Grows.

The Sudeten party, headed by Konrad Henlein, proclaimed its biggest victory to date—92.2 per cent of all German votes cast went to Henleinist candidates, party headquarters announced.

This was an increase from the figure of 88 per cent in the voting of a week ago Sunday.

A total of 444,367 German votes have been accounted for in the two Sunday elections which have been held, according to Henlein's figures, and of these 405,126 went to his candidates.

This would leave more than a million and a half Sudeten German voters still to be heard from on June 12, but the Henleinists are confident the results will be even better than yesterday's, which gave Henlein 283,235 of 307,009 German votes.

Reich Sees Czech "Siege."

Berlin, May 30 (U.P.).—The German foreign office tonight said in a semi-official statement that the Czechoslovakia government has used its military forces in a manner amounting to a "state of siege" to exert pressure on the country in the Czech municipal elections.

The statement was made by Diplomatic Political Correspondence, organ of the foreign office, in pointing out that Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German minority under Konrad Henlein made remarkable gains in Sunday's voting, the second of a series of municipal elections ending June 12.

The foreign office organ discounted any increase in the number of pro-government Czech votes in Sudeten districts on grounds that there has been an alleged "systematic influx" of persons of Czech blood into border districts while "the Sudetens have lost work and bread."

Nazis Attack Hull.

Berlin, May 30 (U.P.).—The influential Nazi newspaper Boersen Zeitung today attacked United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull's declaration reminding European nations of their antiwar pledges and accused the American press of "avoiding a just and impartial stand" toward the Czechoslovak crisis.

San Marino's Council Goes Wholly Fascist

San Marino, May 30 (AP).—The Fascist Party of San Marino, the tiny Republican dot on the map of northeast Italy, today won all 60 seats on the republic's governing council. San Marino, with 38 square miles and a population of 13,948, claims to be the oldest state in Europe.

Gale Prevents Landing Of Liner's Passengers

Southampton, England, May 30 (U.P.).—The liner Queen Mary arrived here late tonight from Plymouth where a 72-mile gale prevented the landing of 400 passengers.

Among those disembarking here were members of the British air ministry mission returning from the United States and Canada, where they investigated the purchase of fighting planes. They left immediately for London by train.

Shoemaker, 75, Dies; Directed War Convoys

Hampton Roads and San Diego naval stations.

Admiral Shoemaker was active in strengthening the Naval Reserves following the war. He established six naval training courses at leading universities, and obtained approval from Congress for improving the status of Naval Reserve officers, especially those in the merchant marine.

In 1923 Admiral Shoemaker appeared before a House committee to answer charges that he had withheld facts in the experimental bombing of the battleships New Jersey and Virginia in 1925. Admiral Shoemaker, chief naval observer of the bombing, told the committee the charges were not true.

He defended the value of naval vessels against air attack.

He was born on Staten Island, N. Y., the son of Capt. Charles F. and Mary Augusta Shoemaker. His father was in the United States revenue service, forerunner of the Coast Guard.

Served Against Spain.

He graduated from the Naval Academy in 1884, took post graduate training in electricity at Johns Hopkins University and in 1898 received command of the U. S. S. Talbot, which he led in operations on the north coast of Cuba in the war with Spain. During the Philippine insurrection he commanded the gunboat Arayat.

From 1907 to 1909 he was in charge of enlisted Navy personnel, and later was made chief of staff for the Atlantic fleet, until his transfer to the war plans section in 1912. For the three years immediately before the war, he commanded the U. S. S. Arkansas.

Following his work as head of the war convoys, he was named commander of battleship division No. 4 of the Atlantic Fleet early in 1919, then commander of battleship force No. 1, Atlantic Fleet, and in July the same year he went to the Pacific as commander of Battleship Division No. 3. A year later he was placed in charge of the Fourteenth Naval District in Hawaii.

Leaves Two Daughters.

He headed the Bureau of Navigation for three years, until retirement.

Admiral Shoemaker was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity, Army and Navy Club and Chevy Chase Club in Washington, the New York Yacht Club and the Bohemian Club in San Francisco.

He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Katherine Davis, wife of Commander Arthur Davis, in charge of plans for the Bureau of Aeronautics at the Navy Department, and Mrs. Alexander Hepler, Seattle, Wash., and a son, W. R. Shoemaker, Vancouver, Wash.

Funeral services will be held at the Mare Island Navy Yard tomorrow, with burial in San Francisco.

U.S. Flag, Swastika Fly On New Nazi Institute

Berlin, May 30 (AP).—The Stars and Stripes flew alongside the Nazi swastika today at the inaugural ceremony of the new Institute of Physics which the Rockefeller Foundation helped build.

The new institute has a specially designed "atom-smashing" laboratory, and facilities for conducting research with 3,000,000 volts of electricity.

Holiday Accidents Kill 203 in Nation

By the Associated Press.

Peacetime death, frequently as violent as that which overtook the wartime heroes whose memory was honored yesterday, struck down at least 203 persons in the Nation during the extended, 72-hour Memorial Day week-end.

With 43 States reporting, the total still lagged far behind last year's three-day toll of 356, however.

As usual, the mounting list of traffic accidents accounted for the largest number of fatalities, 137. Drowning caused 40 more; fire, 5, and miscellaneous accidents, 21.

First 'Flying Lab' Shipped to Britain

Los Angeles, May 30 (U.P.).—The Japanese freighter Arima Maru sailed for Liverpool today, carrying as part of her cargo the Douglas Transport plane that long was known as commercial aviation's No. 1 flying laboratory.

The plane, known in the trade as "Old Ironsides," was sold to Lord Arthur Fobes, British sportsman, by Howard Hughes, millionaire oil man and speed flyer. Hughes had bought the plane and groomed it for a round-the-world flight which he now plans to make in a newer ship.

Miss Diehl Quits; Weather Bureau's Eldest in Service

Miss Genevra B. Diehl will be retired at the close of today from the United States Weather Bureau where she has worked for 50 years and 11 months. She wants nothing of retirement except the privileges of sleeping late in the mornings and long hours of reading, which she couldn't do while working.

MISS DIEHL.

Actually, she doesn't want retirement, and was "feeling a little blue" about it yesterday. She said it was understandable, because 50 years of any one thing becomes very much a part of you—and how is one to feel when, of a sudden and for apparently no reason, the mornings come and there is no work to be done. And particularly when someone has been going down the same sidewalks to the same building for more years than well can be remembered.

Miss Diehl is the oldest preson in point of service in the bureau. As a matter of record, there was no bureau as such when she went there on July 1, 1887. Functions of the weather experts were under the United States Army Signal Corps. In charge was Maj. Gen. Adolphus Washington Greely, then only three years back from his ill-starred arctic expedition of 1881-84.

"I don't recall much of him," Miss Diehl said yesterday. "Being one of the few women in the Government service" (there were only eight in the weather office when she arrived) "I was, naturally a little awed by my superiors."

Her efforts to enter the Government employ were a trifle unusual in those days. Miss Diehl came to Washington from Philadelphia "as a girl" and immediately took a civil service examination for a clerkship. Nothing came of it for a year. Then, after a special examination, she and four other women were admitted on July 1, 1887.

Her first duties were to copy documents and records; later she studied stenography and on the side did translations of French and Spanish. Then the weather offices were at Eighteenth and G streets northwest. In 1891 the work was absorbed by the Agriculture Department. Of late Miss Diehl has worked on crop bulletins, has decoded weather messages and performed a varied work.

"They told me to be sure and come in tomorrow—but I don't care for the ceremonies of leave-taking. I'd rather just walk out, saying to myself, 'I'm through.' And I must be careful tomorow and not arrange some work for completion the next day, for there won't be a next day. But I can start sleeping late in the mornings and doing all the reading my eyes wouldn't stand while I was working."

Tomorrow's anniversary will be an occasion for special thanksgiving among the residents of at least three communities who feel an intimate relationship with the Pontiff.

One of these will be Vatican City, where the yellow and white papal flag will fly from gates and buildings.

Another will be this town, many of whose residents did not expect Pius to return to them another summer when he bade them a sorrowful farewell last year to return to the Vatican.

The third will be the town of Desio, near Milan, where the Pope was born. Masses of thanksgiving will be said there on the anniversary.

Ickes and Bride Meet Premier

London, May 30 (AP).—Harold L. Ickes, United States Secretary of the Interior, and his bride of a week, met the Duke and Duchess of Kent and the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain at a dinner tonight, given by Joseph P. Kennedy, the American Ambassador, and Mrs. Kennedy.

Lord and Lady Astor and the Winston Churchills also were among the 39 guests.

Mystery Planes Invade Japan, Spread Terror

Japan

Lanfeng and Chengchow, the latter the junction point of the Lunghai and Peiping-Hankow railroads.

Two columns of Japanese troops drove westward along the Lunghai to rescue famed Lieut. Gen. Kenji Doihara and his Fourteenth Division, backed up against the Yellow River northwest of Lanfeng by Chinese armies that have surrounded the Japanese and are trying to hack them to pieces with ancient field artillery.

The Japanese military spokesman said "a million and a half Chinese" were in the area around Kaifeng, on the Lunghai west of Lanfeng, and were in danger of being enveloped in a giant flanking movement which the Japanese launched to the south.

The spokesman said numerous Chinese troops found among the dead near Lanfeng indicated Chiang Kai-shek has ordered his best available units into battle against Doihara's men, apparently electing to fight it out there for the control of central China.

The Japanese added Doihara's position was "excellent," although Chinese reports said the entrapped division was nearly out of ammunition and was in danger of being annihilated.

Walls of City Stormed.

Meanwhile, the Japanese had carried their drive south of the Lunghai as far as Pohsien, storming the walls of the city which protects the Hankow Railroad line below Chengchow. The capture of Pohsien would open the way for a Japanese thrust at the railroad and endanger the huge Chinese forces in the area around the Lunghai.

Jack Belden, United Press staff correspondent with the Chinese army headquarters near Kaifeng, reported in a dispatch filed Sunday the Chinese had split Doihara's division, cutting off communication between the westward wing and the main Japanese columns driving toward them from the east.

Trap Closes on Japanese.

Belden said Doihara had withdrawn his men to positions nearer the river where the Chinese expected to launch a mass attack in an effort to wipe out the trapped Japanese before reinforcements could arrive.

The official report of the death toll said 200 were killed in yesterday's raid on Canton, but it was estimated there were nearly three times that many dead. One official said it was "probably as bad as Sunday's raid," in which from 300 to 500 were killed and three times that many wounded. More than 600 were killed in the first raid Saturday. The total casualties of the three raids are listed as 1,500 dead and 5,000 wounded.

The British gunboat Cicala was ordered to proceed from Hongkong to Canton.

Chinese reported one of the Japanese planes was shot down in flames by anti-aircraft guns, and another report said a Japanese plane, apparently disabled, had been forced to land.

Military aviation experts said the changed tactics of the Japanese fliers indicated the planes may have been piloted by foreigners, probably Italians.

warn the fliers to take every precaution against accident.

On the seventeenth lap of the 18-lap, 150-mile race, Ortman, swinging wide around a pylon set in a marsh just east of the field, appeared to have almost brushed his wheels on the ground.

He recovered, however, opening his throttle to overtake Turner, who for the third time had snatched the lead and then relinquished it.

The old American record for closed course racing was 264 miles an hour, set by Michel Detroyat of France in 1936 in the Thompson Trophy race, speed classic of the National Air Races, in Los Angeles.

The new mark was hung up at a meet which was the San Francisco Bay area's first major money air show.

Winners in Toronto Contest Paid Off; 2 Losers Split $25,000.

Toronto, May 30 (Canadian Press).—The four winning Toronto mothers in the Millar "stork derby" were paid off today at the rate of $11,111.11 per child.

The four women, adjudged by the court as tying first-place winners, had fortunes of $100,000 apiece deposited to their accounts, their prizes for producing nine children each in the ten-year period ending October 31, 1936.

Two other contestants who had failed to establish their claims in court received $12,500 each on condition they drop pending appeals.

Announcement of the pay-off was made by the executors of Charles Vance Millar, eccentric lawyer who decreed the bulk of his estate should go to the Toronto mother bearing the most children in the ten years. The winners were Mrs. Lucy Alice Timleck, Mrs. Kathleen Ellen Nagle, Mrs. Annie Katherine Smith and Mrs. Isabel Mary Maclean.

The announcement corrected earlier statements that $75,000 "initial payments" had been made to the four winners.

When liquidation of the $500,000 Millar estate is completed, the winners expect the remaining $75,000 to be divided among them.

19 Boys and Girls Arrested in Theft Of Caviar, Flour

Pancakes and caviar would have been the menu in a dozen Southwest homes last night had not the police interfered with the plans.

What stopped the party was the inopportune appearance of Motorcycle Policeman C. A. Scott at the Pennsylvania Railroad yards in 600 block C street southwest.

Scott became interested shortly after noon yesterday when he noticed a colored boy towing a wagon load of pancake flour, caviar and other foodstuffs. Scott investigated and discovered a boxcar, consigned to the M. E. Horton Co., had been entered.

He watched the car with two other Fourth Precinct police and late last night had rounded up 19 colored boys and girls. Three of the number could not be held because they were less than 7. The others, ranging in ages from 8 to 22, were to appear in Juvenile and Police courts on charges of housebreaking and unlawful entry.

The stolen foodstuffs were valued at $500.

Lawrence, Mass., May 30 (AP).—The Federation of Italian World War Veterans, through its local post, today honored the memory of Edward J. Neil, jr., Associated Press war correspondent killed last winter while reporting the Spanish war, by placing a wreath on his grave here.

Neil was cited by the Italian government for his work as a correspondent in the Italo-Ethiopian war and given the title of "Commendatore" as well as a medal.

Capt. John Quincy Marr, 'Warrenton Rifles,' Died June 1, 1861.

By Katherine Malone Willis.

Just 77 years ago, on the night of June 1, 1861, Capt. John Quincy Marr lost his life in a skirmish at Fairfax Courthouse, Va. This was the start of the actual fighting which became the greatest upheaval on the North American continent.

The inhabitants of the little village were asleep when Capt. Tompkins, commanding Company B, Second United States Dragoons, of the United States Cavalry, rode into the village on a raiding party from the forts outside Alexandria.

The night of May 31 was sultry to oppressiveness. There was no moon. Clouds obscured every star. In the courthouse inclosure was a company of cavalrymen from Rappahannock and one from Prince William, both unarmed. The Warrenton "Rifles," under the command of John Quincy Marr, had marched into town that day and were quartered in a field back of the courthouse.

Former Gov. William Smith was spending the night in the home of his friend, Joshua Coffer Gunnell, the red brick house across from the courthouse, today occupied by the Oliver family. He had come down the day before to visit the Warrenton boys.

Ewell Guest at Hotel.

Over at the old hotel, which long since has given way to a modern bank building, slept a transient guest, one destined to become a great leader of the Confederate forces, Richard Stoddard Ewell. He had been a captain of dragoons in the United States Army, but resigned May 7, 1861. He was on his way to offer his sword to his native State, Virginia.

Suddenly, about 3 o'clock in the morning there was the sound of running feet and cries for help. Rushing breathlessly into the quarters of the "Warrenton Rifles," Private A. B. Francis, a picket stationed one-half mile northwest of the town on the Alexandria turnpike, shouted:

"The enemy is upon us—a cavalry force is on its way—they've captured my comrade and are rapidly making for the village."

The comrade was D. F. Florence. The words of one long since dead, who served with the "Warrenton Rifles" that night, tell what happened:

"We tumbled out in short order, gathered our arms and had scarcely gotten into line, when we heard the cracking of rifles from the direction of the courthouse. One of our cavalry companies was quartered in the courthouse and the other in the church. Our captain, who, in the meantime, had been aroused, now joined us and marched the company from the front of the church to the left of the same, down to and along the fence, where he halted us.

"Rifles" Stand in Field.

"Upon an increase of the firing and an evident rush of the troops toward us, we were ordered to get over the fence into a clover field, being about the center of the company, which was in two ranks. Falling back, by direction, about 15 yards, we were halted, faced to the front, and ordered to make ready. This was scarcely done before the cavalry, and we could barely see the form of it, was upon us; some having scaled the fence and others gone through the gate. Ten or 12 shots were fired by our command without orders.

Part of our company had spread as far as the gate and attempted to resist the passage of the cavalry by charging at them with guns without bayonets, but they were easily ridden down and scattered. I believe that all of those who left the courthouse yard and rode through our command were our own troops. They neither fired on us nor attempted to use the few sabers they had. About this time Capt. Marr, who was just in the rear of us, gave a command: 'Halt!'

"This was the last word heard from him by any of his command."

Confusion and excitement followed the entrance of this cavalry troop into the village. Over at Joshua Gunnell's house there was a baby girl, just six days old, and at the start of the firing Mrs. Gunnell's bed was pushed between the windows to enable her to watch the action.

'Governor's' Boots Lost.

In the same house, the former governor had received word that Marr was missing and was excitedly trying to dress—but he couldn't find his boots! Hurrying into the hall, he called, "My boots —my boots! Where are my boots?"

John Mason, a colored man who slept over the cook's quarters, had taken these boots to clean and polish. John was a handy man. He waited on Rachel, the cook; brought firewood and water, and made fires in the open fireplaces. The last thing he did at night was to collect any shoes left outside the bedroom doors to be cleaned.

But the "governor's" boots were just another pair of boots to John, and he was tired, so he put off cleaning them until morning. He was roused by one of Rachel's children and hurriedly brought the boots, with some of the Warrenton mud still on them.

Brave men, it seems, are often made nervous by little things, and so it was that Miss Margaret Stanhope's steady hand helped the Governor buckle on his sword. Going out into the street, he assumed charge of the "Warrenton Boys," as he called them, leading them out to the pike, and there, on the old stagecoach road, encountered Tompkins' cavalrymen. The troops exchanged shots and the cavalry retreated to the foot of a hill.

Post Men Along Road.

The Governor, however, felt sure this was not the end. He placed his men on either side of the road and gave instructions that no firing should be done until the horses' heads were visible, it being a very dark night.

His suspicions were justified, for, in a short time, the cavalrymen charged up the hill. A fierce encounter followed. The "Rifles" finally succeeded in routing the enemy, but there were a number of casualties.

The next morning at 7 o'clock, the body of John Quincy Marr was found in a clover field. His heart had been pierced by a minie ball.

It has been erroneously stated, at times, that Richard Ewell took charge of the "Warrenton Rifles." Maybe it was just a trick of fate that he did not. At the old hotel he dressed hurriedly in his uniform of an officer of the United States Army. Going out into the street, he was shot in the shoulder. He proceeded down the street and did not return to the hotel to give attention to his wound until after learning that Gov. Smith had taken command of the "Rifles." It is said that the epaulette remains a prized possession of one of the ladies of the town, today.

Gov. Smith, who was 65 years old at this time, declined a commission as brigadier general because, he said, "I am wholly ignorant of drill and tactics." He became colonel of the Forty-ninth Virginia Infantry. Later he was a member of the Confederate Congress. When his regiment was reorganized, he was promoted to brigadier general in command of the Fourth Brigade, near Fredericksburg, Va. Although desperately wounded at Sharpsburg (Antietam), he inspired confidence and daring on many a stricken battlefield and was made a "brevete" brigadier general, August, 1863.

Re-elected Governor.

He went through the Gettysburg campaign and was elected Governor of Virginia for the second time, January 1, 1864, serving until the fall of the Confederacy. After this, he became known throughout the South as "Extra Billy." Following his parole, he retired to his farm, Monteroso, near Warrenton, Va.

Erect and active at 80, he was a member of the Virginia House of Delegates. He died at Monteroso when he was 90 years old.

A reconstruction of the events of that night in 1861 from documentary evidence indicates that Capt. Marr was billeted in the Stephenson home, which afterward became the Canfield property. The church mentioned by the veteran was the old Zion Methodist Church which burned during the war and was rebuilt. Some natives remember when there was a high fence around the courthouse grounds.

Marr Graduated From V. M. I.

Marr was born at Warrenton, Va., May 7, 1825. His father was a justice of the peace and a well-known man of affairs in the Piedmont section. His mother was a Miss Horner. He graduated from V. M. I. at the head of his class in 1846. At this early age he became Mayor of Warrenton and then high sheriff. In 1850, with vision and forethought, he organized a band of 100 men, calling them the "Warrenton Rifles." This band later became Company K, Seventeenth Virginia Infantry, C. S. A.

On May 18, 1861, he marched them to Manassas. This impatient young Virginian requested immediate action and the next day they moved into Centerville, where already a large number of soldiers was encamped. From here they marched into Fairfax Courthouse on May 31 that year.

Hundreds of tourists passing the courthouse today pause to read the inscription on a granite monument flanked by old-fashioned cannon:

"This stone marks the scene of the opening of the conflict of the War of 1861-1865, when John Quincy Marr, captain of the W. R., who was the first soldier killed in action, fell 800 ft. 46 degrees W. (Mag.) of—this spot June 1, 1861. Erected by Marr, C. V., June 11, 1904."

The Joshua Coffer Gunnell home, now occupied by the Oliver family. It was in this home, pictured as it was just after the Civil War, that former Gov. William Smith was spending the night when he took command of the Warrenton Rifles, 77 years ago, to repel a raid. Insert is Joshua Gunnell.

4-H Club's Camp Set Here June 16

The twelfth annual 4-H Club encampment will be held in West Potomac Park from June 16 to June 22, the Department of Agriculture announced yesterday. About 160 members, representing 1,192,000 farm boys and girls, will meet to discuss the topic, "Making the Most of Our Opportunities at Home."

The delegates, two boys and two girls from each State, are chosen for their excellence in farming, homemaking and leadership. While here they will hear talks by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Assistant Secetary Harry L. Brown, Dr. W. R. Gregg, of the Weather Bureau; Allen Eaton of the Russell Sage Foundation, and Miss Josephine Roche, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Peter Levine And The F. B. I.

A sickening note was injected into the holiday week-end by the discovery of Peter Levine's mutilated body. The horrible treatment that befell the 12-year-old boy at the hands of kidnapers has shocked the entire nation. As in the Lindbergh case, evidence strongly suggests that extortion was attempted even after the victim had been killed. In the Levine case, however, there is some small satisfaction in the knowledge that this crowning outrage was frustrated.

Federal and local police have mobilized quickly to pursue the new clues, though the assignment comes at a difficult time for the G-men. Their personnel is now reduced in an effort to minimize a prospective deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30. Ironically, the Levine case was a considerable factor in inviting this deficit. In January the finances of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were in a seeming condition to warrant slight pay increases for the G-men, and such were ordered. Promptly the bureau received an abnormal number of calls. Expenses for travel, communication and the like soared.

By the end of March it appeared that the FBI would exceed its $6,000,000 budget by some $172,000. The House Appropriations Committee agreed to advance $65,000 out of the bureau's 1939 appropriation. This left $107,000 to be found. The only choice was to order all possible agents to take their annual leave, thus minimizing overhead. But efficiency was seriously affected and lately application was made for a deficiency appropriation to permit recall of at least certain of the men.

As a general rule, deficiency appropriations are not desirable. However, the FBI is scarcely master of its own expenditures. It can not anticipate the number and timing of the crimes in which its invaluable services will be needed. The current development strengthens the case for making up the small deficiency, particularly since the solution of such atrocious crimes as the murder of Peter Levine is an essential preliminary to economy in this wholesale field of Federal endeavor.

A British Formula For Spain.

With the exception of Russia, all nations represented on the London non-intervention committee have approved the latest British formula for the evacuation of foreigners fighting in Spain.

The plan envisages a temporary stoppage of munitions shipments to the Spanish combatants. This would be done through the closing of the French and Portuguese land frontiers and through the revival of the international naval patrol of Spanish waters while a neutral census of the "volunteers" on both sides is being made. In other words, the non-intervention agreement of August, 1936, would at last come into full force, a development which, even at this stage, might have real advantages in keeping the Spanish conflict confined to Spain.

But the past record of attempts to make non-intervention a reality offers little encouragement for the success of this latest effort. Even were the British plan ideally conceived, even were it scrupulously even-handed as between the factions in Spain, doubts would exist as to the probability of its effective execution. It cannot be forgotten that from the beginning the "hands off Spain" pledge has been honored by several signatories in the breach rather than the observance.

During recent months, largely as a result of the influx of men and supplies from Italy and Germany, Gen. Franco was able to sweep on to the Mediterranean. And while the government forces, through additional aid from friendly sources abroad, have managed to stop the Nationalist offensive, their military situation continues to be precarious. Were it possible, at this time, to establish a real cordon sanitaire around Spain the presumption is that Franco would benefit by this development far more than would the republicans.

To Italy and Germany, therefore, the British plan may appear a simple way of achieving a victory for Franco without further sacrifice on their part. Should such calculations prove wrong, there is always the possibility that they would again treat non-intervention as a scrap of paper.

It is, in this connection, an ominous circumstance that on May 14, at Genoa, Mussolini declared that "we desire and will the victory of Franco." Hitler has spoken to the same effect. The presumption is strong that neither of the Fascist dictators is prepared to allow events to take their course in Spain unless there is strong assurance that the ultimate outcome will be in line with their well-defined ambitions.

Nevertheless, if it were possible by means of the British plan as it stands or as it may be modified to bring about real non-intervention all Europe would benefit by the lessening of the present dangerous tension. No doubt that explains the readiness of the truly neutral nations to follow London's lead. In the last analysis, however, it will be the attitude of the major European powers, in particular that of Italy, Germany, Russia and France, which will make or break any such agreement as the British have in mind.

Fighting The Purge.

Senator Wheeler's warning against attempts to purge the Democratic Party tends to emphasize the strength of the opposition which this movement has aroused. The Senator from Montana will not come up for re-election until 1940. Hence he is not personally threatened by the present Administration fight against those who have been off the New Deal reservation. Yet he, like many other Senators who would not be immediately affected by the proposed purge, has taken a defiant stand against it.

There is, of course, objective reason for this attitude. It is not so much the political future of a few individuals as that of the Democratic Party which is at stake. "If these Government officials are going to continue to inject themselves into primaries between Democrats," says Senator Wheeler, "it can result in only one thing—the splitting up of the Democratic Party and the possible defeat of Democratic candidates in November." He fears that party's chance of winning in 1940 would also be jeopardized.

A gulf already exists between the White House and the Jeffersonian Democrats in Congress. If it is widened by continued Administration efforts to destroy candidates who voted against the Supreme Court bill, a major political realignment is likely to take place. Men like Senators Wheeler, Burke, Bailey, Gillette, George, Clark and King will not bow to such a challenge. If the fight is forced upon them, they are likely to accept it, even though the outcome means a permanent break-up of the discordant elements now constituting the Democratic Party.

White House advisers responsible for this strategy ought to remember, too, that the Republican Party is holding its arms open to the "rebels" who believe in independence of the judiciary. That was evident in a recent address by Senator Vandenberg. It was emphasized in the Niagara Falls speech of former Gov. Landon last Saturday, as indicated when he said:

> This distinction between a Republican Jeffersonian Party and a Democratic anti-Jeffersonian Party might suffice for the reintroduction of a genuine and prolonged two-party battle. It offers opportunity for a definite line-up based on fundamental principles again. It can attract those practical liberals who, following Jefferson, were always equally opposed to government oppression and economic oppression.

Even without a merger of Jeffersonian Democrats and Republicans, division of the Democratic vote would give a great advantage to the G. O. P. By entering the lists against anti-court-bill candidates of their own party Harry Hopkins and the "elimination committee" have sharpened the best issue the Republicans have had for a long time.

Nor is it lost to sight that the attempted purge is fundamentally at variance with a principle deeply rooted in the Democratic Party. If this movement should be successful, the resulting political machine would be democratic in name only. Actually it would be a dictatorial organization subservient to the will of the President. All of its representatives would be put on notice that independent thinking would mean their downfall. That is an impossible outlook for those who take the traditions of the Democratic Party seriously.

Democracy Upheld.

The example which Czechoslovakia has been setting the rest of the world is most heartening.

At a time when the powerful democracies of the west have manifested a discouraging tendency to bow before the winds of aggression, actual or anticipated, Czechoslovakia has stood firm. Determined to maintain her sovereignty and independence, she remains equally determined to preserve her democratic institutions unimpaired.

The Prague authorities might have found very convincing pretexts for postponing the municipal elections scheduled for May 22, 29 and June 12. They fully realized that, coming at this time, such elections were loaded with international dynamite since the practically certain outcome was an increase in strength of the Nazi Sudeten German party.

But the Czechoslovak government took no steps either to shelve those elections or to interfere with them in any way. Henlein and his subordinates were able to conduct their campaign unmolested, though their activities involved a real threat to the independence of the republic. Democratic principles demanded that the elections, whatever their outcome, be held as scheduled and that was enough for President Benes, Premier Hodza and their colleagues. In view of the possibility of a sudden German coup across Czechoslovakia's frontiers the Prague government did proceed to reinforce the nation's frontier defenses. But this obviously rational precaution was carried out with a minimum of hysteria and a maximum of cool efficiency.

The result of such level-headed tactics has been helpful both to Czechoslovakia and to world peace. Ten days ago it was believed in some quarters that a German-Czechoslovakian war, possibly involving all of Europe, was in the offing. Now such fears have distinctly subsided. Last Sunday's municipal balloting in Czechoslovakia had practically no accompaniment of disorder.

In the German-speaking areas, Henlein easily carried off the honors. With greater warrant than before, he is in a position to speak for the very large majority of Sudeten Germans. The Prague government, accepting the implications of this voting, is ready to confer with him regarding ways and means to safeguard every legitimate claim of the German minority. But the events of the past fortnight have made it clear that the Czech leaders are unwilling to bow to demands definitely threatening to Czechoslovakia's independence, which was not and could not be an issue in these elections.

New Approach In Order.

There are two good reasons for crediting rumors that the President would like to revive the reorganization bill and secure action before Congress adjourns. One of those reasons is that the House vote to recommit the bill after its passage by the Senate was generally interpreted to be a vote of no confidence in the President. Another is that the Federal administrative system is greatly in need of a complete overhauling.

Against these arguments in favor of reconsideration some very strong and valid objections may be raised. Not the least of these is the current effort to purge the Democratic Party. An Administration using its enormous power to defeat legislators of the same political party who will not truckle to executive wishes is in no position to request a further grant of power over Governmental agencies. Moreover, Harry Hopkins' political activities have become a strong argument on Capitol Hill against the creation of a new Cabinet post that would probably be given to him.

In both the Senate and House there was justified resentment at the legislative strategy previously employed by Administration spokesmen to force acceptance of its program. Instead of following the House in voting upon separate bills, covering more or less well-defined aspects of the reorganization plan, the Senate was induced to vote for an omnibus measure of a comprehensive type.

Despite extensive amendments which limited the large discretionary powers conferred upon the President under the original plan, this bill was too all-embracing to permit adequate discussion and discriminating action on the part of legislators. Offered as separate measures, for instance, proposals to abolish the office of the Comptroller General and to set up a Civil Service Administrator in place of the present commission would undoubtedly have encountered much stronger opposition.

As a result of ill-advised strategy in assuming that the House could be persuaded to accept the Senate bill the Administration eventually found itself with nothing at all. Had it been content to accept less than the whole loaf it might have been given the powers for which it asked to shift and combine executive agencies. Another attempt to force through the rejected omnibus bill in spite of recent experiences would be almost an affront to Congress. If such an effort should succeed it would imply that Congress—or at least the House—had capitulated under pressure.

The situation calls for a completely new approach to solution of the problem of reorganization. The task of framing legislation to cover the various aspects of such a program requires a great deal of time and calls for careful consideration. With important unfinished legislation before it, and impatient for an early adjournment, Congress is in no mood to resume debate on a reorganization program. It will not be easy to change that attitude.

Hard To Swallow.

Chimney swallows are fairly good chimney sweeps. They do their sweeping with their wings and their babies. The babies have a habit of tumbling out of their nests onto the hearth and papa and mamma come down and hunt for them.

If the fireplace hasn't been closed up for the summer they fly around the room and have to be captured and carried outdoors. If the fireplace is closed the birds manage to get up the chimney again; but just how has not been ascertained. Anyhow, in the fall the farmer has a fine collection of well-fertilized soot on the hearth to carry into the garden; and the chimney is fairly well cleaned. All of which information is cheerfully vouchsafed to a Shinnston, W. Va., correspondent. It may come in useful some time.

The Shinnston correspondent has been telling us a good one. It takes more than one swallow to make a summer or a newspaper yarn so he has given us "some three hundred." The "some" indicates a praiseworthy disinclination to exaggerate. There were perhaps originally a few less than three hundred. But swallows are notably prolific and, like the men in buckram, they have been known to increase in the telling.

It appears that the birds "nestled in a chimney, caused an explosion of coal gas" which did a hundred dollars' worth of damage. To the birds? No, indeed! We are informed that the birds "pell-melled out of the chimney after the explosion."

Except for that last sentence it would seem a case for Senator Minton and Mr. Benjamin Ginzburg.

Wage-Hour Regulation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us get over the silly myth that we have had overproduction as a cause or the cause of the depression. We have never had overproduction, but underconsumption. That was caused by losses that caused fear which dried up confidence which in turn dried up production and which in turn froze capital.

Underproduction has been due to the one principal factor: Lack of sufficient wages to purchase things with. Even in the best of times this condition has obtained. The masses have neither the organization, opportunity or ability to force their own wages and consuming power up to a level that is fair and necessary for a healthy, comfortable, natural existence. Thus a national wages-hours law is necessary.

The President is 100 per cent right in that the States will never solve the problem. It is a national problem and requires national regulation and control. Such will come. There must be minimum wages and their natural corollary, the regulation of hours, and only the national Government can do the job.

Virgin Islands Incident.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't know just what Legionnaire Harlan A. Carter was hoping to get over in his letter in The Post on May 26, but he censured a Federal judge in the Virgin Islands for taking the stand he did in dealing with some Nazi sailors.

What I do know is that our country is the only one on earth where foreign groups can parade and demonstrate with impunity. The judge in question was perfectly within his rights, and his action was in the interest of law and order. Summary procedure against offensive and undesirable individuals in nowise reflects upon the nation they represent.

Latin-American Politics.

To the Editor of The The Post—Sir: One wonders if Mr. A. Curtis Wilgus remembers that certain German residents of Brazil were involved in the Integralist revolt there some time ago. His article on Latin America in The Post of May 27 doesn't sound like it.

Mr. Wilgus should read some of The Post's back numbers for indications of European political activity in South America.

The Railroads And Taxes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American railways now face a problem of major importance which will be most difficult to solve. The Government refuses their petition to increase service rates while the labor unions refuse to accept the 15 per cent reduction in wages which the railways say is imperative.

An important factor in connection with the matter, and one which is generally lost sight of, is the enormous burden of taxation which has been placed on the railway business. Take, for example, the State of Kansas, a State of medium size, but one which has received enormous subsidies from Congress upon the basis of impoverishment of its citizens. The total taxes paid by all railroads in Kansas for 1937 amount to the huge grand total of $6,851,472.77. This includes a total of $469,060.63 for unemployment and social security, sales and use taxes and corporation license taxes.

It is evident that Kansas railways are excessively overtaxed and that a large proportion of the money paid to the various counties of the State might be used to better advantage in maintaining the present rates of freight and passenger service. And if the problem is still further analyzed it will be discovered that our present system of taxation is not only unjust, but that it is directly responsible for continuance of the business depression.

The exact formula is as follows: Increased taxes, increased unemployment, increased destitution, increased public charity, increased taxes, increased unemployment, increased destitution, increased public charity, increased taxes, and this in never ending succession. There is but one remedy for this, namely, abolition of all planned economy experiments with consequent reduction in taxation resulting in more employment and normal prosperity.

HENRY WARE ALLEN.

Army "Blues."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 27 Westbrook Pegler wrote on "Army Blues." Mr. Pegler said: "As to the accuracy of some of the representations in the following note I have no information." I quote this so you will know my remarks are not directed at Mr. Pegler as much as at his informant.

This officer's bitter attack on Army "blues" is all poppycock! He speaks of the dress uniform as "part of that purposeless panoply of war which seeks to glorify it." Certainly this officer did not have his experience in the World War, for, to quote him, "blues" were formally used in the "day when the most arduous duty consisted of watching evening parade." He further informs that the "present-day soldier works." He does indeed, and so did the pre-war soldier.

Army "blues," until the World War, were required as a part of every officer's and soldier's equipment . . . it belonged to the wardrobe. It was not required during the World War, since "blues" were for dress, and our particular business at that time was fighting. The service or field uniform was all that was necessary. Since that time our forces have been reorganized and our duties are more varied.

I believe the average man of the armed forces is glad of the return of Army "blues." When a man is going to any sort of function he usually changes his clothes—unless for some reason he must wear his business dress. The average business suit gets hard wear and the man changes to his "best clothes." That is all that Army "blues" are—best clothes. When an officer or soldier changes from service uniform to "blues" he does not change "to strut at teas or crock parties in horsefeathers and gold braid." He wears the uniform designated by regulations for such occasions.

I do not believe any soldier believes that "pride in the service" or "our Army's ability to fight" is a "matter of blue cloth and gold braid," nor is it a desire "to look beautiful on social occasions." "Blues" are not "fancy dress"—they are formal dress. If this officer does not care to buy "blues," or if he is soured on "blues," he does not have "to strut in horsefeathers;" he is at liberty to always send his regrets for any occasion formal enough to wear "fancy dress." Only officers who are on duty at regular Army posts or those on duty with troops are required by regulations to procure Army "blues."

I know the women of the forces are glad of the return of Army "blues."

I wonder if this tirade against "blues" is not some personal grudge of this officer rather than interest in saving the proposed $5,000,000. It may be an antipathy for woolen mills in Massachusetts—or perhaps for Mrs. Rogers, whose mills he mentions.

And is not this officer speaking out of turn when he says, "remind ourselves that the United States is supposed to be a democracy." This officer has forgotten history. The United States is a democracy.

"A Thoroughbred."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of May 26 there appeared among the news items a short paragraph concerning a small pamphlet entitled "Business Honesty," an address delivered by Richard Whitney in 1931.

Apparently Mr. Whitney had functioned as a capable financier, making money for himself and others, which has never been considered dishonorable. Later, perhaps due to the depression, his plans failed, he lost money, his and that which others had entrusted to him for gain. When the was faced with the accusation that he had taken money which he could not return, he promptly admitted the charge, accepted the verdict and met its consequences with the finest spirit.

If character inheritance means anything, and I think it means much, I would call Mr. Whitney a thoroughbred and deserving of respect even, or especially, in his misfortune.

Relief Expenditure Accounting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post has very effectively in the past few days called public attention to the surreptitious efforts of Mr. Hopkins to eliminate all independent accounting control over his spending of relief funds. His efforts would have been successful except for the alertness of The Post.

An attribute to the effectiveness of the publicity given this matter by The Post was the fact that the Senate Appropriations Committee on May 18 devoted almost half of its entire session to consideration of the desirability and effectiveness of independent accounting control over the spending of Mr. Hopkins, Mr. Ickes, Mr. Wallace and other relief administrators.

It now appears that this independent control will be continued. However, there is still the possibility that Mr. Hopkins in executive session may yet succeed in striking out the provision for independent accounting control in th same effective manner that he accomplished such action in the last minute of executive hearings of the House Appropriation Committee.

There is a much greater issue at stake than the loss of 3,400 jobs in the Treasury Department. It is the question of whether one of the most potentially powerful individuals in the United States shall succeed in his efforts to be free from all restraint during the next important year—either the restraint of the President, the restraint of Congress, or the restraint of regularly published accounting and financial statements.

With over half of the bank deposits of the American people invested in Government bonds, and with approximately half of the Government debt held by banks, and with the threat of the dumping of large foreign holdings of United States Government bonds hanging as a cloud over the Government bond market, the unrestricted spending of an individual who wants no restraint over his power may easily throw the Nation into financial and economic chaos, from which monetary inflation can be the only result.

Mr. Hopkins has already had one opportunity to do his own accounting in connection with expenditures of CWA and FERA funds, and the results were of hopeless confusion, which has only been relieved by special bills in Congress for the relief of disbursing officers whose accounts have never been untangled. The public debt was modest and the credit position of the Government was strong at that time compared to its condition today. Only $750,000,000 was involved in Mr. Hopkins' spending program at that time, and two and a half billion dollars is involved in the present appropriation bill.

It is my hope that you will see the importance of the question to which The Post called attention first: on May 14, and will feel that this is sufficiently important for comment which does not reduce the question to the clamor of 2,600 people for retention of their jobs. It should be raised to the question of 120,000,000 people being concerned over the future of a democratic form of government.

The Post Impressionist

Traffic Mexicano.

"NOWHERE in the world is traffic so tangled as in Washington!"

You have said it yourself. All your visiting friends have said it. And I used to say it myself before I drove down to Mexico City. But not any more.

There in the beautiful capital of Old Mexico, on the ancient palm-shaded boulevards of a modern city, the bewildered American tourist discovers the saddest, most reckless and fearful automobile rodeo possible to imagine.

To the terrifying din of shrieking brakes, tinkling windshield glass, clashing fenders and grinding steel, the visiting driver is welcomed to the city. He finds the Good Neighbor policy practiced right up to the hilt, with every Mexican car trying to crawl into the front seat beside him.

It isn't because the Mexicans can't drive, or that they don't have plenty of traffic policemen and crossing signals and all the usual laws and regulations. They have nice white stripes on their streets and have signs and gadgets on every lamp-post, but still the grand circus goes on.

The trouble lies in the buoyant Latin spirit, that once behind the wheel of a car, just doesn't give a whoop, and lets the fenders fall where they may. Add to that psychology the fact that a pedestrian is never right and is always fair game the instant he leaves the comparative safety of the sidewalk and you begin to get a hazy idea of what started this game of automobile tag, which now ranks second only to bullfighting as the national sport.

Then there is the added zest of 7,000 taxicabs, and taxi drivers are a race apart the whole world over. An opening wide enough for a bicycle is a challenge to a Mexican taxi, or rather to four or five at once, and somehow they get all of their car through and part of yours.

And in the midst of this roaring maelstrom of flashing machines, thousands of bicycles weave, and an endless stream of tiny buses flows serenely through, no matter how tight the jam. These Mexican buses deserve more than passing comment. They never stop unless completely blocked in, which is seldom; the nimble passengers jumping on and off when they slow down at corners. This is just one more hazard for the automobilist, for a Mexican bus, usually carrying passengers on both running boards and on front and back bumpers, sprays them off both sides while going at full speed, in the middle of the street.

Of all the many interesting things to see in the old capital of the Aztecs, the American tourist will find no more intriguing sight than that offered daily in the Zocolo, or main plaza of Mexico City. Here the experienced visiting driver, hardened by years of American traffic, finds himself go cold and limp. It is best to watch this awesome spectacle from afoot, well back from the curb.

Here twelve main streets and five street car lines pour their frantic traffic into a great square about twice as large as the Capitol Plaza. Natives will tell you that there is a system observed, but they understate the fact. There are hundreds of systems and each driver observes a different one.

Even the traffic policemen have entered into the spirit of the thing. The Mexican motorcycle cop is indeed resplendent, being without doubt the world's best-dressed policeman. And what is more, he is usually a very learned man, being able to speak at least two, and often five, languages. But instead of tagging reckless motorists, the Mexican mounted practices stunting on his motorcycle until he can do everything but shave while going 60 miles an hour sitting backward.

On Sunday, in Chapultepec Park, scores of these gorgeous gymnasts do their stuff—standing on each others shoulders while going at full throttle, jumping through burning hoops, hurtling over obstacles. They can do anything and everything, and tell you all you want to know in Spanish, English, German, French or Italian, but they won't interfere with the good clean sport that goes on in the highways and byways of Mexico City.

Most Americans soon learn the wisdom of parking their cars and touring the city afoot, or chasing a bus until it slows down a little, and seeing it that way. And they also learn that a garage or filling station is much safer than parking at the curb, because even the wide Paseo de la Reforma cramps the style of the Mexican driver, whose motto is: "A fender before fiesta!"

One of the first things the visitor notices in Mexico City is the preponderance of brand-new cars. But one isn't there long before he knows the reason for it. Depreciation never takes place south of the Rio Grande. Destruction, yes, senor, but no depreciation.

So the next time you think that Washington traffic couldn't be worse, spare a thought for the rollicking, carefree, lethal tangle of Mexico City, and be assured that it is nothing.

They may not have as many automobiles down there, but carramba, they have more fun.

Dixie Lag

Southern Social Statistics.

AS A SOCIAL WORKER who has had contacts over the South, as one who has made surveys and taught social work I am profoundly perplexed by the social lag in Dixie.

When the annual murder rates are published Southern States and cities constantly win every high place. For example, the United States homicide rate was 8.5 per cent 100,000 of the population in 1936, the highest reliably known rate in the world. The New England rate, however, was only 2.3 when the East-South-Central rate was 38.5, the West-South-Central rate, 22.8. Chicago and New York lived up to their gangster reputations with rates of 8.5 and 5.2, respectively, compared to a 2.7 rate for Boston. But Chicago and New York were Sunday school picnic grounds compared to Richmond with its 20.3 rate. Or note Shreveport with a homicide rate of 67.9; Atlanta, 60.9; Macon, 59.3; Nashville, 56.8; Memphis, 45.

TURNING TO illiteracy, where are the worst rates? Every 10 years an official answer is made by the United States census. The answer is unfailingly the same, down South in Dixie. For example, the illiteracy rate for those 10 years of age and over, including the foreign born, for the United States in 1930 was 4.3, for Virginia, 8.7; South Carolina, 14.9; Alabama, 12.6. Illiteracy of those 21 years of age and over was 5.3 in the country as a whole, but in Virginia it was 10.8. The figures for the Old Dominion are used not because they are pre-eminently bad; Virginia is one of the enlightened black belt States.

Look at the vital statistics published by the Federal Government for 1935. The United States death rate was 10.9 per 1,000 of the population; Virginia had a rate of 11.5, Georgia, 11.3; Louisiana, 11.2. Glance at the infant mortality figures. The United States rate was 55.7 per 1,000 live births, the Virginia rate, 69.6. Death rates from tuberculosis are influenced by many factors, but Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, Maryland happen to have high rates. The rate for the country in 1935 per 1,000 of the population was 55.0; for Virginia, 74.1.

SUPPOSE YOU desire to see a good mental hygiene program and reasonably modern facilities for the care of the mentally sick and deficient. Then travel north. To Massachusetts, for instance. Not many places are doing a decent job in this field, but no Southern State leads the way. Virginia has no training program for the feeble-minded and supplies woefully insufficient facilities for their incarceration.

Where are Community Chest goals low and practically never reached, per capita annual gifts smallest, social work programs generally antiquated? With the noteworthy exception of Richmond all answers here are the same. In social work engineering, Northern cities, not Southern, furnish the occasional encouraging example of how to organize a community welfare program. For per capita gifts in the $2.50 to $3.50 range turn to Cincinnati, Cleveland, Hartford, New Haven. For per capita gifts of a dollar or less almost any city in Dixie will serve as illustration.

The South adopts social legislation reluctantly. The only States without workmen's compensation laws in 1936 were Mississippi and Arkansas. Texas and Virginia have no support legislation for illegitimate children.

The Once Over

Holiday Aftermath.

"Well, summer is here all right," declared Elmer Twitchell. "I was in that Decoration Day auto jam and got all the proof of it. Thousands of people denouncing thousands of other people as idiots, tramps, potential murders, and all that sort of thing.

• • • •

"I wasn't on the road one hour over the holiday week-end before I was getting abuse from all sides and with such intensity that I knew summer was back.

• • • •

"People can be irritable in the winter and touchy in the spring, but it takes summer to make them quite mad, ugly and man-hating.

"Of course, the autoists aren't at the peak of their bad manners and irascibility yet. They won't reach top form much before July, but they're way ahead of last year in all-around meanness, impatience and intolerance.

• • • •

"When they started away over the week-end most people were in fairly good humor and well disposed to their fellow men. Some were even smiling and laughing. But you should have seen 'em coming home Decoration Day night!

• • • •

"Boy, were they sore, sour and sullen!

• • • •

"Sunday they had only reached the point of arguing with strangers, but by Monday noon they were fighting among themselves.

• • • •

"It will be days before some men and their wives are on speaking terms again. The things they said to each other in those traffic jams!

• • • •

"I didn't see a kindly, benevolent face in that homecoming holiday crowd. It seemed to be a competitive drill for the Sour Puss championship of the open highway.

• • • •

"How did I make out? Well, to be frank, my character underwent a complete change, too. I remember hissing an old woman pedestrian, barking at some school children and biting a couple of strangers in arguments at busy intersections.

• • • •

"It's funny what summer traffic does to a man," concluded Elmer sadly and penitently.

Donald Richberg urges businessmen to make peace with the Government. But the trouble is that nothing brings such heavy firing from the New Deal ramparts as a flag of truce.

Strikes in public schools have become quite common. We heard of a case yesterday where a pupil's report card showed a mark of 99 per cent in picketing.

Nobody can turn a funeral into a war rally like Adolf Hitler.

Drunken auto drivers were fewer in 1937, according to reports. Or else the pedestrians were quicker on their feet.

INCURABLES.

Our doctor reported the most puzzling case of the year last week: A stock broker who can't get any sleep.

Oliva Dionne, father of the quints, has got a little recognition at last. It has been agreed by the board of guardians that a new home will be built for the five girls and that the parents will be permitted to live in the same house. Maybe the theory is that, when out-numbered five to two, parents can't do children much harm.

Portraits in Miniature.

1.—The Lawyer's Wife—

How can she think?
She reads no law;
Poor humbled soul,
For her whole life
She must be wrong.
A lawyer's wife
Has but one goal—
Respectful silence

2.—The Stomach Doctor's wife—

Cooking indigestibles
Is what she loves to do,
Strange are the selections
She puts on his menu.
For here you will discover—
Oh, pause a bit and mourn!—
Those foods that for his patients
The doctor has foresworn.

3.—The Perfect Friend—

She is a human wailing wall—
All folks, both young and older,
Bring her their problems and their woes
And weep upon her shoulder.

Lost Leadership

Action Of 101st League Council Meeting Marked End Of Franco-British Leadership At Geneva Deliberations.

By C. Poznanski,
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Geneva.

THE GENERAL FEELING during the last session of the Council of the League was one of depression. Nearly everyone emphasized the contradiction between the League ideals and grim reality. And most of the observers drew the conclusion that the League is moribund.

There can, of course, be no doubt that the League crisis is extremely serious. The secret debates on the subject of the neutrality of Switzerland proved abundantly that for many countries the obligations of the League Covenant appear to be a burden without compensating advantages. Nevertheless careful analysis of the events of the last session points the conclusion that its outstanding feature was not so much the bankruptcy of the League ideas, as the bankruptcy of the Franco-British leadership.

The German and the Italian press has long accused the League of Nations of being simply a puppet in the hands of Paris and London—an obedient servant of the British and French imperialism. In fact, until now, if Paris and London were in agreement, there was little difficulty in obtaining a unanimous vote of the Council of the League. It is, of course, unfair to say that the British and French dictated to the Council, but their leadership was unquestionable. It was so unquestionable that it had become nearly a habit of the Secretary General to visit Paris and London before each important session of the Council.

Agenda Plans Laid In London Frustrated.

IT IS this leadership that failed sadly at the 101st session of the Council. The agenda had been more carefully prepared than usual. For more than a month Paris and London had been in a permanent consultation. A few days before the opening of the session Daladier and Avenol went to London to perfect the plans. Nevertheless none succeeded.

The opening day of the meeting Lord Halifax met his first defeat. He had insisted that the session should begin by a statement which he wanted to make on the Italo-British agreement. It was meant of course for internal consumption. Neville Chamberlain wanted to be able to say in the House of Commons, that the Ciano-Perth agreement had received enthusiastic support from the League of Nations. The statement fell flat. M. Bonnet naturally supported it warmly; so did Poland and Rumania. But the Belgian approval was qualified, M. Litvinov was sarcastic and all the other members of the Council—Great Britain's New Zealand not excepted—remained icily silent.

The second defeat came with respect to the Ethiopian question. When Neville Chamberlain—apparently without having consulted his foreign office—made his statement in the House of Commons that Great Britain would recognize the Italian Empire with the authorization of the League, he clearly anticipated a vote of the Council which would empower the member states to recognize the conquest and which would practically expel Ethiopia from the League.

The plan was impossible. It was then decided that members of the Council would make statements as to the position in Ethiopia and that the president of the Council in summing up these statements would draw the conclusion that in the opinion of the Council Ethiopia is no longer an independent state. Even this less ambitious scheme failed. First of all, the Negus had been admitted to the Council table. And this admission signified that for the League of Nations Ethiopia is still a member of the League. The League does not recognize former emperors. Otherwise Otto of Hapsburg, Alfonso of Spain or Wilhelm von Hohenzollern could appear at Geneva. If a sovereign of a state sits at the Council table it proves that his state still exists.

Added to this, the speeches of the members of the Council who supported Great Britain simply affirmed that the question of recognition or non-recognition is a question of individual decision for the states.

Finally, there were four dissentient speeches by the representatives of Russia, China, Bolivia and New Zealand.

The net result of the session was thus the spectacular reaffirmation that Ethiopia is still member of the League, and that the League still recognizes Haile Selassie as its lawful representative.

Final Blow Dealt On Spanish Question.

THE FINAL BLOW, however, to the prestige of Great Britain and France came with the Spanish question.

Spain's appeal was placed on the agenda at the request of the Barcelona government. London and Paris wanted first of all to avoid debate entirely. There were diplomatic demarches in Barcelona asking for the postponement of the appeal. They did not succeed. Then the idea was advanced that the Council should in a private session by a majority vote agree to postpone the appeal to the next session. After consultation with specialists of the League procedure this appeared impossible. Lord Halifax and M. Bonnet resigned themselves, therefore, to listen to the speech of Sr. del Vayo, to make their statements in favor of "non-intervention" and hope that this would finish the whole matter.

But again they were disappointed. First of all, after the declarations by the representatives of Spain, Great Britain, France and Russia the president wanted to close the discussion. But Sr. del Vayo insisted on his right to reply at another meeting. This request could not be refused without a gross violation of the rules of procedure and the president of the Council reluctantly agreed. And at this second meeting del Vayo presented a resolution which—very neatly—was a reproduction of a resolution drafted at the last Assembly by the British representatives and voted at that moment by all the members of the Council.

Lord Halifax lost his temper. He bluntly declared that the resolution was in direct contradiction with the policy of His Majesty's government without remembering that by this declaration he disowned his predecessor. France and Poland also opposed the resolution. Again the president tried to close the discussion without taking a vote. When del Vayo insisted on a vote, the president was so taken aback that he interrupted the meeting and assembled the members of the Council in a secret session, without the representative of Spain, to decide what to do.

It immediately became clear that there was no issue. The rules of League procedure are strict. Any resolution presented by a member must be voted if the state which presented it insists.

Biggest Surprise Came On Actual Vote.

THE MEETING was reopened and then came the biggest surprise of the session. Only two members voted for the Spanish resolution: Spain and Russia. But only two members joined Great Britain and France in voting "No:" Poland and Rumania. All the other members of the Council abstained, among them Belgium which always had followed Franco-British policy, Sweden which is also an element of the British system, and even the Latvian president who throughout the whole session did his best to facilitate the task of Lord Halifax. And New Zealand explained its abstention in terms which left no doubt that Mr. Jordan had desired to vote "Yes."

This isolation of France and Great Britain in the Council can not be explained solely by sympathies for the Spanish government. In Latin America, for instance, such sympathies are virtually nonexistent; nevertheless, the three Latin-American States abstained from voting.

The vote on the Spanish resolution was merely a symptom of the fact that the influence of Great Britain and France is declining and that the members of the League no longer care to take a definite position on questions which are not of immediate concern to them simply to please France and Great Britain.

This vote was simply the spectacular confirmation of the fact that the Franco-British leadership is gone.

One might perhaps draw the conclusion that the leadership lasted only so long as Great Britain and France represented the idea of collective security and international collaboration and that it vanished the moment Great Britain and France decided that it would be more "realistic" to recognize committed aggressions and to try to buy out potential future aggressors. One might perhaps observe that the Franco-British leadership was undisputed as long as France and Great Britain had a League of Nations policy, and that it disappeared the moment their policy became uncertain.

One might also observe that the League is not completely dead if its rules of procedure are able to check the desires and plans of the great powers.

But that would all be a different story. The important point for the moment is that Franco-British leadership at Geneva is now a thing of the past.

Off the Record

Wolf! Wolf!

By Barnet Nover.

Europe Between Breathing Spells.

DURING THE PAST fortnight, as on so many other occasions in recent years, Europe appeared to be on the verge of that general war which nobody wants and nearly everybody anticipates. But, happily, no war came. Indeed, the crisis was followed by a measurable easing of tensions and with it a new growth of optimism regarding the outlook for continued peace.

There are not lacking those who, recalling the fable of the shepherd boy who was always crying wolf! wolf! though there was no wolf in sight, argue the point that, on this occasion as before, the threat of war existed only in imagination. At no time, they say, was there any real danger of a German attack on Czechoslovakia and thus of a conflict arising out of such an attack.

Maybe they are right. It is possible that the Third Reich had no real intention of invading the territory of its little neighbor. It is also possible, and much more likely, that the Berlin government hoped by a threat of force alone to cow the Czechoslovak republic into giving way to German demands and, failing in that endeavor, decided to hold its hand. But there is also the possibility that Germany was prepared to carry out a military coup against Czechoslovakia alone but decided not to do so in the face of the possibility that Czechoslovakia would be aided by outside powers.

IN OTHER WORDS it may be that, in this instance, the cry of the shepherd boy which summoned the sheepherders was sufficient to scare off the wolf. The lad in Aesop's tale may have been more sharp-eyed than moralists usually give him credit for. And, anyway, the important fact remains that ultimately the wolf did come.

Will the same thing happen in Europe? The Old World has successfully managed to avoid war despite a constant succession of blows to peace. No war followed Germany's action in tearing up the disarmament clauses of the peace treaty, the invasion of Ethiopia, the remilitarization of the Rhineland, Fascist intervention in the Spanish civil war and, most recently, Germany's annexation of Austria. Could Europe's peace survive a similar succession of incidents, beginning with the destruction of Czechoslovakia's independence?

To this question no definite answer can be given. Obviously it would make all the difference in the world whether the nation or nations responsible for future incidents meet with any resistance or were allowed, as in the past, to wreak their will unhindered.

• • • •

FROM THIS POINT of view the Czechoslovak crisis may prove to be a turning point. In the first place Czechoslovakia made it very plain indeed that, despite the disparity of strength between herself and Germany, she was prepared to defend her independence by force. And, in addition, it appears that this decision by the Prague government was reinforced by warnings to Berlin from the governments at Paris and London.

For the time being, therefore, the continued existence of Czechoslovakia as an independent state is assured. But of the future of that democratic republic no one can yet speak with any real measure of assurance.

At the present time Czechoslovakia's defensive strength vis-a-vis Germany is considerable. Although the German army has expanded to great dimensions during the past four years, the Third Reich's rearmament is not yet complete in all essential categories, most notably trained reserves. But such handicaps are certain to be overcome in time. That means that sooner or later Czechoslovakia may again be in danger of attack.

• • • •

CZECHOSLOVAKIA'S future, therefore, hinges not only on what she herself may do to ward off possible attack but also on what others do in support of such efforts.

This is the nub of the Czechoslovak problem. It is also the nub of the problem of preserving peace in Europe. Hitherto peace has been maintained by allowing the expansionist states to expand without interference. But this policy of peace-by-retreat tends to break down when, whatever the great powers may wish, the potential victims of aggression are determined to fight back. That is happening in the Far East. It has been happening in Spain. Czechoslovakia is the latest case in point.

• • • •

TO ALLOW Czechoslovakia peacefully and piecemeal to fall into the Third Reich's lap is one thing. It is doubtful if the Chamberlain government, for instance, would have done much to interfere with such a development. But to stand by in the face of the possibility of an actual war between Germany and Czechoslovakia was something which Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues could not do unless they could also persuade France to wash her hands of her ally.

Instead of doing that, however, the French leaders repeated their pledge to aid Czechoslovakia if it were attacked by Germany. Great Britain, therefore, was under strong compulsion to put strenuous pressure on the Reich to keep the peace and did so successfully.

What it all sums up to is this:

It is apparently becoming more difficult for the expansionist powers to find easy victims than was the case hitherto. For Japan, Manchuria was a walk-over, China as a whole is not. For Italy, Ethiopia was a walk-over. Spain is not. And for Germany, Austria was a walk-over, but Czechoslovakia appears to be made of sterner stuff.

In the face of the will to resist displayed by the actual or potential victims of aggression the great powers are certain to find it more and more difficult to pursue a policy of retreat in the face of aggression. The Czechoslovak crisis is proof of that.

Thus one of two possibilities are open. The powers interested in preserving peace must so consolidate their forces as to make further aggressions impossible by making them unprofitable. Or, through persuasion, they can try and seek to win over the totalitarian states to a policy of peaceful co-operation. Hitherto they have tried the second without the first. They failed. Perhaps now they may concentrate on both at once.

Aiding Japan

By Eliot Janeway.

Oil And Steel To Nippon.

JAPAN is the one nation in the world whose aggression we fear. Japan is the unashamed attacker of a country with whom we sympathize, whose magnificent defensive stand we admire heartily. In this attack have occurred atrocities—the bombing of universities, for example—which shock the world.

American industry is selling Japan the goods which permit her to do this and to rear grandiose schemes for continuing to do this on a scale so huge that all western Asia will be reduced to the level of the Japanese subjects in Korea. Seventy-five per cent of the gasoline Japan used last year, gasoline for tanks and bombers and warships, came from the United States. One-third of the steel she made last year, steel for shells, bombs, dum dum bullets, was made out of American raw materials.

Here, then, is the paradox. The Japanese menace is made possible by American exports. Because of the Japanese menace our Government is building battleships with money which might otherwise go for housing or to ease the tax burden of our people. What is to be done about this situation is up to the American people.

Harrington Off To Aid Gillette Against Wearin

Iowa House Delegation Splits Further Over Senate Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 30.—The split in the Iowa Congressional delegation which attracted national attention last week when WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins indorsed an opponent to Iowa's Senator Guy Gillette in next week's primaries, showed further signs of widening today.

Representative Vincent Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa, was winging toward Des Moines today to take up the fight in behalf of Senator Gillette. The Senator himself hurried to Iowa Saturday following Hopkins' indorsement of Representative Otha D. Wearin (Democrat), of Iowa, who is opposing Senator Gillette for renomination on the Democratic ticket.

"I want to speak for him because he is from my home district and my predecessor in the House," Harrington declared last night in Washington. He said he would fly here to give one speech in Gillette's behalf.

Opposed Court Reform.

The Senator gave an address at Davenport yesterday in which he stressed safeguarding representative democratic government under the Constitution. He stood at odds with the Administration in Washington, voting against the court reform proposal.

Next Monday Iowa voters will go to the polls to select the Democratic and Republican nominees for offices from United States Senator down to the lowly township positions. Fighting to head the Democratic ticket are five candidates, with the political eyes of the Nation on the battle between Senator Gillette and Representative Wearin.

Two Republicans, former Senator L. J. Dickinson and Representative Lloyd Thurston, are spending most of their time firing at the New Deal rather than at each other in a quiet contest for the G. O. P. nomination. Senator Gillette is occasionally made a target for his alleged capitulation to the New Deal after the Supreme Court fight.

Wearin Backing Grows.

Meanwhile the string of Federal indorsements for Representative Wearin was kept going by I. T. Jones, executive assistant of the Iowa National Emergency Council. Jones asserted President Roosevelt "should have the right to define and have voice in the election of the men he needs to assist him."

"It develops that Otha D. Wearin is preferred for the senatorial post. Therefore, the good soldier will say: 'I am for Wearin,'" he added. The council co-ordinates the activities of Federal agencies operating in Iowa.

Wearin previously had been indorsed by Representative Edward Eicher, of Iowa.

Gillette Target of Both Sides.

Senator Gillette plans to deliver three more addresses in Iowa this week to wind up his campaign, two of them over the radio.

Commenting here on attacks on his record as both a "pro" and "anti" New Dealer by one Republican and two Democratic candidates, Gillette said:

"It is apparent that the only community of interest among the three is that they want my job."

Meanwhile, Wearin called it "a serious thing to have Democratic leadership in Iowa opposed to the Democratic leadership in Washington." He listed instances in which he said Gillette had failed to co-operate with the National Administration.

G. O. P. Seeks Volume.

With a colorless contest in progress for the Senate and with several State ticket candidates unopposed, Republicans are turning to local legislative and county government contests to enable them to maintain numerical superiority over the Democrats in primary vote volume. The party polled 260,000 votes for senatorial candidates in 1936, compared with 141,000 for Democratic aspirants.

Thurston, elected to Congress seven straight terms, hung up victories in 1932, 1934 and 1936, while the Democrats were winning consistently nearly everywhere else in Iowa. Dickinson lost to Senator Clyde L. Herring by 36,000 votes two years ago when Roosevelt rolled up a 133,000 vote margin over Alfred M. Landon.

2 Presbyterians Named for Clerk

Philadelphia, May 30 (AP).—The Rev. Paul C. Johnston, of Rochester, N. Y., and the Rev. William B. Pugh, of Chester, were nominated today for stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

Election of the church's executive officer for a five-year term will be held tomorrow. The present stated clerk, the Rev. Lewis S. Mudge, of Philadelphia, will retire in August, when he reaches the age of 70. He held the office 17 years.

The Rev. Charles F. Wishart, president of Wooster, Ohio, College, told the General Assembly government has steadily encroached upon education.

The annual convention of co-operative wholesale companies, held in New York during the week-end, was attended by seven Greenbelt residents.

They are Mrs. Bertha Maryn, the only woman on the Greenbelt Co-operative Organizing Committee, which is making preliminary studies before assuming control of Greenbelt's business enterprises; Charles E. Fitch, Fred Wilde, Dr. Dodson, William R. Poole, Reed P. Maughn and Peter Carroll.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

False Report Spiked

Civil Service Commission President Harry B. Mitchell makes formal denial of the often-heard complaint that the Federal Government doesn't want in its service any persons except the holders of impressive diplomas and degrees. He cites figures as showing that the commission has placed no undue weight on a college education and elaborates on the subject before the joint convention of the Postmaster Association and Postal Groups of Florida, at St. Petersburg, as follows:

"There appears to be an impression abroad that the Civil Service Commission gives undue weight in its examinations to college education. Repeatedly the commission has pointed out that there is no basis for that impression."

The commissioner then pointed out that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1937, there were original appointments made from competitive civil service registers to the number of 44,484. Of that number only 1,802 of the persons so appointed were required to have collegiate education of any sort, he said. Most of these were appointed to scientific and professional positions, and a few to subprofessional or subscientific positions.

"The only examination which requires a prerequisite of college education, and as a result of which some appointments were made to other than scientific and professional positions, was what we called junior civil service examiner," he stated.

"A couple of years ago," Commissioner Mitchell went on, "the Senate adopted a resolution urging that the Civil Service Commission provide greater opportunities for men and women just out of college. Following the adoption of the resolution, the commission decided to widen the scope of an examination previously held for the supplying of examiners for its own staff so that other departments would find the resulting register useful in the selection of employes.

"From that register 420 persons were appointed during 1937, many of them to sub-professional or subscientific positions, and others to positions which could not be so classed. Thus, it will be seen that of all the appointments made during the year referred to, only about 3½ per cent were of persons whose examination required college education."

This seems an opportune time to bring up the case of a scholar who has toted long his fine and formal education and who has watched the civil service examination lists without seeing even a hint of the Government's desire for the services of a man of his education. His case is brought to light permissibly. Harvard gave him an A. B.; thereafter, he studied and traveled in Europe, journeyed to North Africa in further pursuits of knowledge; mastered French, Latin and Greek and scholastic philosophy and withal had the aptitude to become, for a while, an educational adviser in the CCC and the manager of a fruit farm and cannery. The scholar says he is becoming more and more aware that education itself isn't the key to the Federal job door. He says his own experience will bear out what Commissioner Mitchell has said—and meanwhile, he is keeping his eye on the lists of examinations with the hope of their calling for a man with his sort of talents.

Entertainments: "Her Husband's Wife," a three-act comedy by A. E. Thomas, will be presented tomorrow and Thursday evenings by the Agriculture Players in the Agriculture auditorium. The leading parts in the hilarious play of a misunderstood husband will be filled by Jimmie Rome, Alice Burris Campbell, Anita Zorn, Fred Krist, Jack Selby and Carmen Montes. Helen Zott is directing the production. There is no admission charge . . . Gordon Barnes (FSA) recent contest winner at the Wardman Park Hotel, and Al Welch (GAO), will be featured at the Union Playhouse Friday evening in the Agriculture auditorium. "The River" and "Salt of the Earth" will be added attractions. There will be no admission charge. . .

Education: "The Population Problem and Social Policy" will be discussed by Prof. Gunnar Myrdal, of Harvard University, at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Agriculture Auditorium. The Agriculture Graduate School is the sponsor. He speaks Thursday on "Population Trends in Relation to Agriculture in Sweden" . . .

We've been watching the activities down at the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park to note that somebody there is certainly on the job. Nearly every release tells of some important visitors and how the visitor has left important relics at the place. Probably no other National Park officials have such facility for prevailing on visitors to leave interesting things on the ground. Edward T. Stuart, of Philadelphia, is the latest to make a notable contribution to the Fredericksburg area. His gifts were pictures and books (previously he donated considerable land). Among the pictures are a large steel engraving of Julio's Last Meeting of Lee and Jackson; an engraving of Robert E. Lee, after a photograph, published by Sartain, Philadelphia; an original water color of Federal baggage wagons by W. T. Trezo; a reproduction, in black and white, of D. H. Anderson's painting "Three Generals—Grant, Sheridan and Sherman;" a lithograph of Grant and other officers, after H. A. Ogden's painting; an engraving of a group of Confederate officers, R. E. Lee, Ashby, Beauregard, Early, Pelham, Mosby, and Hampton; and an original Currier and Ives print of the Battle of Spotsylvania Court House.

45 Get Diplomas At Holton-Arms

Holton-Arms School's three-day commencement exercises opened yesterday with an essay-reading program and award of prizes. Erma Castillo Najera, daughter of the Ambassador from Mexico, read her honor essay, "Conrad and the Sea." Among other prize winners was Marion Lorraine Miller, of Annapolis, Md., who received the alumnae award for outstanding contribution to school life.

A tree planting ceremony and buffet supper followed the opening program. Patrons of the school will be hono: ' with a reception at 5 p. m. today. Tonight the dramatic club will present "The Lady From Alfaqueque," directed by Jane Plummer Rice.

The 45 members of the graduating class will receive their diplomas at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow.

20 Nurses to Receive Georgetown Diplomas

Graduation exercises for the School of Nursing of Georgetown University Hospital will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Gaston Hall. The Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown, will make the commencement address and award diplomas to 20 young women.

'Vital Christianity' Parade Planned At Mount Rainier

In a mass demonstration designed to "vitalize Christianity" in the area of Mount Rainier, several thousand persons, most of them members of the Protestant congregations of that section, will unite in a giant parade next Sunday at 4 p. m.

Gayly decorated floats depicting the work and aims of various church groups will be in the parade, as well as children and adults dressed in costumes portraying religious customs in many lands.

Churches participating will be the St. John's Episcopal, of Mount Rainier, the Mount Rainier Methodist, Mount Rainier Christian, First Baptist of Mount Rainier, and the Brentwood Methodist.

Marjorie Weaver, Film Player, Exercises to Keep Her Sparkle.

Actress Keeps Balanced Menus, Leaves Table a Bit Hungry.

By Ida Jean Kain.

"GONE WITH THE WIND" seems to be dying down to a mild breeze as motion picture material, but our current choice for the Scarlett O'Hara role would be Marjorie Weaver—provided she is not too old by then! She is now 23.

Like the high-spirited Scarlett, this little girl from Louisville, Ky., is a startling contradiction of the notion circulating among us Yankees that the Southern beauties are chiefly distinguished for their gentle languor. Marjorie Weaver's most distinctive characteristic is that intangible quality which some women never have and others never lose. The current term is "yumph," and in Hollywood it is the thing a star dreads most in the feature player.

Marjorie Weaver, that lovely Twentieth-Century Fox newcomer, is a hard-working, hard-riding Kentuckian with decided ideas about exercise and a balanced diet. She rides horses, swims, plays tennis and hikes and likes milk and simple foods. She always follows the Spartan practice of leaving the table a bit hungry and thus keeps her weight down to 112 pounds.

Illusion of Beauty.

Boiled down, "yumph" appears to consist of illusions, sometimes of true beauty, and, always, radiant health. It is no illusion that Miss Weaver is extraordinarily pretty. And how is her health? So good that she played in 16 different pictures in slightly more than a year. That record represents tremendously hard work and is proof of superb vitality.

This ability to eat up work and like it, Miss Weaver tells me, makes it hard for her to hold herself in check. As time goes on, I believe the hardest thing she will have to do is guard this marvelous vitality. In the movie business the tendency is always to overwork and the top-notchers, so I am informed, are constantly fighting nervous breakdowns. The more successful they become the less time they have for the habits that make for sparkling personalities and successful careers.

The little Southerner has worked out a very sensible program and all she needs to do is to continue to follow it. Being from Kentucky, she is naturally an enthusiastic horsewoman and rides from 4 to 6 hours at a time, usually twice a week. On other days she swims, plays tennis or hikes.

Smart About Diet.

She is smart about her diet, too, and likes milk, a good breakfast and balanced menus. She holds her weight down to 112 pounds for her 5 feet 3 inches by the simple but spartan practice of leaving the table a bit hungry. She just makes up her mind that she has had enough to eat . . . Now, why can't you do that? It looks to me as though Marjorie Weaver and Scarlett O'Hara have a lot of determination in common.

Miss Weaver herself credits smart casting for her rapid progress. Her parts have only demanded that she be herself. With a little simulated meanness, she would fit perfectly the role of the fiction heroine and that, too, would be smart casting.

Pique Is for Sports And Lace for Dress; Organdy Is General

Paris (U.P.).—Pique for sports and informal wear; lace for dress-up occasions; organdy good the clock around—that's the way the fashion world divides the honors in trimming this summer.

White is naturally the most prevailing color for pique, although Mainbocher trims a little gray wool and light blue plaid "schoolgirl" dress with light blue pique collar and cuffs. Talbot uses all kinds of small flower print piques for her bolero, glove, and hat ensembles.

Pique vestees are seen on tailleurs, dresses, and even coats, the favorite trick of the season being to simulate a two-piece outfit by tacking a vestee onto the blouse of a dress, or to make a coat look like a skirt and bolero jacket with the aid of a similar device.

The Emotions Get Recognition Of Employers

HOW is your emotional health? This question, according to Frances Maule, author and chairman of publications of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, employers are asking. Miss Maule tells why in an article appearing in the current Independent Woman, which is published by the federation. And she gives eight tips in new techniques that workers can put into practice themselves to maintain their emotional health.

"No less than 70 per cent of us, say authorities, suffer at one time or another from emotional or mental disturbances that threaten our success in life," Miss Maule says. "The Association of American Physicians places the percentage at 80 for hospital patients.

Adult Reactions.

'Our employers are deliberately, systematically and scientifically making our emotions their business. They have learned that emotional states have just as much to do with employes' value as the strength of foot arches or the toughness of physical constitutions. And they are setting up means, not only of detecting a lack of emotional stamina, but of giving scientific treatment to emotional disturbances.

Eight Tips Offered.

The eight tips she gives for practicing how to maintain one's own emotional health are:

Search childhood's emotional upsets for situations like those now bothering you; then snap out of infantile behavior patterns.

Try actually to be superior in something, rather than merely pining to be thought superior.

Find yourself a job big enough for you, even if you have to spend holidays writing a novel.

Relax. Cultivate a sense of humor.

Lead a well rounded life.

If none of these things works, see a doctor.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Picnic.

"Has everybody had fried chicken? . . . Luther, you didn't get anything but a neck! Give him another piece, Pearl . . . Grace, here's your peanut butter sandwiches—the doctor won't let her eat anything fried. Say, has the slaw been all around?

"What did you say, George? . . . Forks? . . . Look in that basket, Mamie . . . What? . . . Don't tell me we forgot the forks! . . . Well, here's two knives—Luther, you and Pearl can use the same one . . . and Jed and Susie . . . oh, yes, and somebody can use the can opener . . . and here's a corkscrew . . .

• • • •

"My, it's so nice to eat outdoors this way . . . and breathe all this oxygen—Sister! Take your hands out of the peach pickles! . . . Junior! What ARE you trying to do? . . . A caterpillar! . . . Well, all right, lift it off . . . No, quick, before it gets into the salad!

"What, Elmer? . . . Salt? . . . Oh, it ought to be somewhere . . . Thanks, Aunt Nannie. Pass it on to Elmer . . . Mamie, pass Aunt Nannie's deviled eggs around . . . Arthur, you better take another piece of fried chicken. That's nothing but a neck . . . What, Elmer? Why, wasn't that salt? . . . Sugar! Oh, I'm sorry . . . Oh, I remember! The salt's there in that cake box.

"Say, was that thunder? . . . I expect we'd better hurry along—Shoo fly! They're beginning to get bad . . . Junior, leave that hornet alone! . . . Now, who wants lemonade and who wants iced tea? . . . Wait! Wait! You've got me all mixed up. I tell you, I'll just pass the bottles along and you can all take your choice . . . Cups? . . . Where ARE those paper cups? . . . Oh, yes! Jed, will you reach in that basket under your feet and get the paper cups?

• • • •

"Doesn't everything taste good outdoors this way? . . . You know we ought to do this sort of thing oftener—Sister! Don't put your sticky hands on Uncle Arthur! Come over here and sit by Mamma . . . What's the matter, Luther? . . . Why, yes, it's iced tea . . . Let's see . . . Oh, you've gotten Grace's prune juice—the doctor makes her drink another cup for Luther, Mamie . . . What? . . . Well, maybe he can drink out of the pickle jar.

"Say, did I feel a raindrop? . . . It was! . . . And there's another! Oh, well, I don't think there'll be many. See—the sun's shining . . . Pass the chicken around again, Mamie, Elmer's got nothing but a neck . . . I DO wish you'd sit down, Maude, and quit waiting on everybody—Be still, Junior! A few raindrops won't hurt you . . . What, George? . . . Well, maybe we had better go to the cars until it's over. Buhdle up the cakes, Susie . . . Mamie, spread that wrapping paper over the table . . . Here, everybody, take a piece of chicken and a deviled egg to eat in the car.

"See, I told you it wasn't going to rain but a few drops. Now it everybody'll just find his old place we'll eat the ice cream . . . Wait, Pearl! Spread some dry papers over that seat . . . Watch out, Susie! Don't sit in that spider's web! . . . Now, Mamie, you pass the cake while I dish out the ice cream. Shoo fly! They're always so bad after a rain—No, wait, Arthur, don't take that—it's Grace's jello. The doctor won't even let her taste ice cream.

"Pearl, give Luther some of the chocolate cake. He's not eating enough to keep a bird alive . . . Don't everything taste good outdoors this way? You know, we'd all be a lot better off if we'd eat out this way all the time. The whole trouble is we lead such unnatural lives—say, Grace, is there something on my neck or do I just imagine it? . . . A little worm? O-O-h! Did you get it? . . . No, Sister, Mamma doesn't want you to have another piece of cake. Take a nice orange . . . What is it, Luther? . . . A spoon? . . . Why didn't you speak sooner? Your ice cream is all melted. Mamie, hand Luther that big spoon out of the coleslaw.

"I simply love being out in the open this way—Pearl, is there something moving on your cake? There is . . . It's another of those funny little worms.

Wait, wait a minute, George . . . Luther! come back here . . . Arthur! We've got to finish this ice cream. It'll all melt . . . Susie, can't you eat that other peach pickle? . . . Mamie, you take that half of deviled egg. We can't let all these good things go to waste . . . Here, Aunt Nannie, I'll finish up the coleslaw if you'll take that chicken neck . . . Mabel, can't you eat the rest of Grace's jello? . . . Hasn't it all been fun? You know, we ought to do this sort of thing oftener. . . . Wait! What's this? Say, do you know what we've done? . . . Say, whit. Everybody come back! We forgot to eat the potato salad."

Puffed Sleeves Used In Chanel's Fashions

Paris (U.P.).—Chanel's summer collection put quite a crimp in the plans of the Paris dressmakers who are advocating still shorter skirts and tighter sleeves, for Chanel hides all the knees of her mannequins and even lets some of her summery afternoon dresses strike a point half way between knee and ankle. Sleeves puffed themselves to balloon dimensions and looked like puffballs as they fell off the shoulders of a number of evening models.

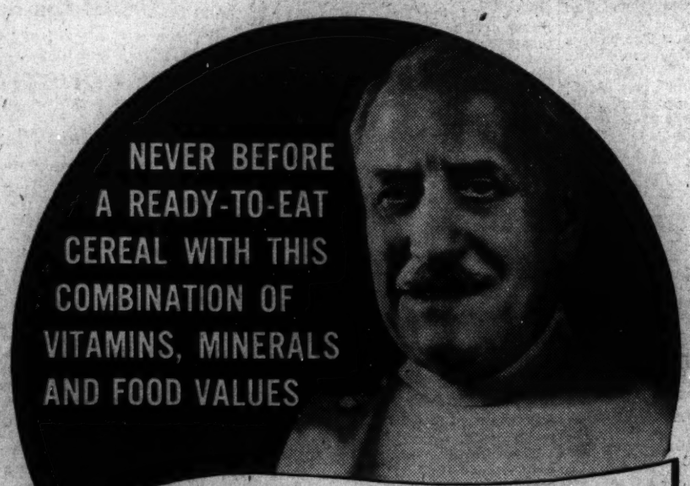
1. Never before a ready-to-eat Corn cereal with such wonderful crispness . . . Stays crisp in cream until the very last spoonful.
2. As much Vitamin D in one large helping as in one teaspoonful of standard Cod Liver Oil.
3. A Corn cereal that actually contains more Vitamins than Nature herself put into the corn . . . Enriched with Calcium and Phosphorus.

"Delicious" is the Word for KIX!



VITAMIN B—Corn KIX contains Vitamin B. This vitamin assists in the promotion of growth and stimulation of appetite. It also contributes to the proper nourishment of the nerves and blood.

VITAMIN D—Corn KIX contains Vitamin D. This essential vitamin, also known as the sunshine vitamin, aids in building bones and teeth. Children, especially, need it.

CALCIUM—Corn KIX also contains calcium. Calcium helps to build bones and is necessary for sound teeth. Growing children in particular need plenty of it.

AND KIX GIVES YOU A COMBINATION OF FOOD VALUES THAT NO READY-TO-EAT CEREAL EVER HAD BEFORE

A new breakfast dish . . . exciting . . . different . . . delicious . . . because we wanted to give you a "perfect" ready-to-eat cereal! Just try it!

You'll find a new thrill in these crisp, crunchy globes of deliciousness—that stay so marvelously crisp in milk or cream until the very last spoonful . . . yet just seem to melt in the mouth.

And compare Food Values. Children and grown-ups, too, need the important vitamins and minerals you get in Corn KIX. And some of them it's hard to get enough of in the ordinary diet.

Ask your grocer for Corn KIX today. Delight your whole family with this wonderful new taste thrill for breakfast tomorrow. See if they don't all agree —"A perfect breakfast cereal at last."

GENERAL MILLS, INC., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO DOCTORS, DENTISTS AND DIETITIANS

We believe that you will welcome Corn KIX as an important addition to the general diet. If you will write us on your professional letterhead, we shall be glad to send you free, a full-size package for your own use. Corn KIX has been fortified by the addition of the following: 115.6 milligrams of calcium and 82.3 milligrams of phosphorus pentaoxide (each calculated as dicalcium phosphate) added to each ounce of cereal. 200 U. S. P. units of Vitamin D added to each ounce of cereal. (1½ ounces of cereal contains Vitamin D equivalent to a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil). A greater percentage of wheat germ incorporated in the cereal than found in the whole wheat berry.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'What of Woman Who Marries for Convenience?' Asks Widow Contemplating Such a Step.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please tell me frankly what you think of a woman who marries solely for convenience, certain things being taken into consideration, of course. For instance: I am 32 years old and have no home and no known living relatives. I have always been very delicate physically, having had a number of serious illnesses and chronic ailments of one sort and another. Several doctors have advised me to quit work, but how can one do that and pay doctors' bills and living expenses, especially if one were born poor?

* * * *

Doctors tell me that one of my major handicaps is nerves, which a complete rest and happier living conditions might eventually cure. I have had two severe shocks in my lifetime, one as a child in my teens, when I came home from school to find my home in flames and my parents burned alive; the other when my husband was killed in an automobile accident and my baby was born dead as a result of the wreck.

* * * *

For two years I have been going with a man who is a few years older than I. I respect this man very highly but I do not love him—judging by the love I had for my husband. He is familiar with the circumstances of my life and knows that I do not care for him, but he says he is willing to risk marriage because he loves me and wants to take over the job of making my life happier and more comfortable. He feels sure that my health could be brought back to normal by proper medical care of the sort I cannot afford to procure.

Do you think it would be sensible for me to accept his offer? If I accepted, do you think he might later regret it? I don't want to jump out of the frying pan into the fire, and yet I have what is probably a natural desire for the better things of life such as this man could give me. Is that an entirely selfish attitude? And should I be ashamed of wanting to accept something for which I can give so little in return?

* * * *

Frankly, I cannot understand why this man should wish to marry me, because it seems that the odds are all against him. I cannot have any more children, I cannot give him love and surely a nervous, medically expensive wife would be a bigger liability than asset, and one which few men in their right mind would care to have. I have given him every argument I can think of against the proposal and still he clings to the assertion that our marriage would be a success. Why, I cannot see.

* * * *

Finally, I have told him that I would leave the matter up to you, because I feel that you, with your good judgment, and knowledge of, as well as contact with, various problems of life, are undoubtedly in a better position to see the situation in perspective than we are. If you will give an opinion, I shall appreciate it very much.

UNDECIDED.

What to Believe.

DEAR UNDECIDED: A woman of mature years is not to be despised for marrying a man of contemporary age for reasons of convenience, if the marriage is contracted on a basis of complete frankness and there is any appreciable equity of exchange, such as appears to exist in the proposition you are so hesitantly considering. You may ask: What have I to give him in return for his love and care? The answer is—(supposing he is being absolutely sincere in his representations to you; and you equally sincere in your representations to me)—the inexpressible pride and joy that the worth-while man experiences in cherishing, as his wife, the woman he loves. The peace, contentment, companionship and inspiration that a man never finds elsewhere than in the company of a well-loved wife who is, in herself, a superior woman.

* * * *

That you are a superior woman is fairly well established, I think, by your sensitive, unselfish reluctance to accept a proposal which, on the surface, at least, would seem to benefit you immeasurably more than the man; by your almost self-accusatory inquisition into the motives which incline you to accept; and by your determined insistence that the man be shown the very worst side of the bargain before he commits himself to it. Many another woman of average moral fiber, similarly handicapped, would coolly, calculatingly and promptly accept the proposition, refusing to look too closely into the goods the gods had provided.

* * * *

It may be that you are superior in many ways to man; perhaps you have greater spiritual reach, greater self-sufficiency, a finer mind, more social grace; and it may be his awareness of this difference in your favor which convinces the man that the greatest gift that life could give him would be yourself, in the guise of wife. If he feels that way about you, it is idle and shallow to ask yourself, or him, what you have to bring him in exchange for his love and material care.

* * * *

However, your decision to marry or not to marry this man should be based, finally, on the answer to one question of gravest importance, namely: Since you "do not love him," "do not care for him," would it be possible for you to accept his love, on mutually tolerable terms, in the intimacy of marriage? As a once-married woman (who married for love) you realize the importance, to yourself and to him, of keeping faith with your own nature in regard to this question. You realize that no man of normal endowment contracts marriage with the thought in mind of sharing a platonic association with his wife. Yet men, for the most part, understand so little of a woman's nature; are so shortsighted, where love is concerned—that it behooves the woman to look to the future and study all hazards that would have a bearing on the core of their relationship.

* * * *

It is not, in my opinion, necessary that you "love" this man in order to marry him, be happy with him and give him great happiness. But you must be very sure that you will always find it possible to give him, in sincere and generous measure, sweet-tempered companionship; affectionate, thorough-going loyalty; never-failing friendship and warm appreciation of his goodness to you.

M. H.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 30.

THESE BE THE times that try reportorial souls in little old Gotham. Practically every night a summer joy-spot roguishly beckons us to come on in and see its first dose of hot-weather fun. Usually I am looking hard the other way, but a few nights ago Ben Marden's Riviera, just across the Hudson in Jersey, caught my eye, and there I was. So I put on my best black silk, my priceless garnets from Moscow, a synthetic eager look and went.

ALICE HUGHES.

That ornate place, with its removable roof which can let the starlight in, was offering its opening floor-show, and to my astonishment I found it packed, not with my newspaper pals, but with leading New Jersey political lights, and their henchmen and yes-men, come to honor an editor named Borg just appointed to a good big job. So we settled down in a nest of ward-heelers and job squatters to see the jollity. There were the lovely, frozen girls, as usual; a gabby magician, a sister act, and a blonde minx who did bad imitations of stars with all the shy reticence of a circus calliope. We munched our filet mignons despondently, thanking gosh that our table was near the exit, when something happened. Old Sophie Tucker came out!

This was nothing novel. Sophie has been around these 30 years, girl and woman. But the grand old sister put life, and the clever showmanship which seemed to die with vaudeville, into the evening, and a thousand people chirked right up. We forgot the politicoes choked by iron collars as she bellowed a sly number, got maudlin over the old, OLD Broadway that is dead, and then roared into "Some of These Days," the old ballad that first brought her fame in show business. So a flossy night club packed with stuffed shirts was suddenly filled with human warmth—thanks to a grand old girl wise in the ways of crowd-winning!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Every New York neighborhood has its favorite hangout for the younger crowd, just like Castle's Drug Store back home, and even our quiet and slightly stuffy Murray Hill is no exception. The young folks who like to gab and sing, even, gather nightly at strangely-named little bar-restaurant called "The Place de la Concorde," which is down on Lexington avenue. You can't buy an escargot, or galloping snail-in-butter there, but you can get beer and chili con carne, and so the boys and girls sit there each night and for a half a dollar have an elegant time. I often look in and sigh wistfully for the chili dives of my own girlhood . . .

* * * *

Once lovely blonde Ethelyn Holt was a famous photographic mannequin, and posed for the color photo in the once-noted "pinch-crunch" hat in a cigarette ad that swept the country. Then she married a young broker, and started taking singing lessons seriously. That was six years ago. The other night I heard Ethelyn sing at a benefit fashion show, and right nicely, too. Not all ex-models fritter time away on beaches!

* * * *

Note on New York manners of gents. They almost never surrender bus or subway seats save to very old ladies or women with babies in arms. They almost never doff the hat in business elevators, reserving that old-time courtesy for apartment house lifts. You see, this is a town of working women, and the constant lifting of the skimmer exposes the boys to head colds and also ruffles their toupees. Ah there, Lord Chesterfield!

* * * * * *

When you come to town and see a huge crowd before a window near Grand Central Deppo, don't scream, it isn't a murder at all. It's a man making strawberry shortcakes in the window of a one-arm beanery.

Chop fine and put in a shallow dish 4 medium-sized raw potatoes, 3 tablespoons of butter, salt, pepper, a little chopped sweet pepper and tablespoon of cream. Cover with crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Little Tidbits.

Little tidbits or small pieces of uncooked lean lamb are just right for using in stew—in meat loaf—patties—for braising and serving with noodles. Lamb leftovers may be used as other leftover meats: in croquettes, to stuff peppers, as the filling for French toasted sandwiches, or as curried lamb.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Family Doctor Proves Worth.

"As I was saying when I was interrupted (see yesterday's article), the public seems to be sold on this business of regular health examinations," said my old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, who has just had one. "But I'm not so sure about their necessity.

"You wrote a very sensible article on the subject in your book on the 'Care and Feeding of Adults,' and the thing kind of died down for a while. But I notice it is coming up again. Here is an advertisement by a drug firm. There is a picture of a middle-aged man and his daughter and under it it reads, 'What will you mean to your children after 50? Pick up your telephone and make an appointment with your doctor for a complete checkup.'

"It all sounds very plausible but there are some doubts in my mind. First place, doctors are like economists—they can diagnose more than they can cure. I read a long editorial the other day telling the cause of the depression. Very simple—it is just due to the consumer having limited his purchasing power. Soon as that gets back everything will be all right. But it neglected to say how we were going to bring it back.

"Same way with doctors—they are quite capable of finding some trouble in the annual physical examination that they can't do anything about. I know a lot of fellows that are going around putting their blood pressures down in a little book and worrying sick over them because on a health audit they were found to have high blood pressure. That health audit turned a happy, carefree citizen into a melancholiac.

"Then they are liable to find something that suggests a surgical operation. I knew one fellow in whom they found a condition which might kill him in 10 or 15 years. So he had an operation that killed him in five days. The health audit didn't lengthen his life any.

"I think they are very necessary for children. And if an adult is going to have one, he should go to his family doctor. And the doctor needn't be too thorough. He should study the weight, the heart and pulse and lungs (in young people the lungs are very important) and look for diabetes. It isn't so necessary to look for Bright's disease—you might find it. Do a glucose tolerance test, and get a history and good general physical examination, including the eyes and teeth.

"That's my program for an annual health audit. You know a good test of their value is how many doctors have them done. I bet I'm the only doctor in Saragossa County ever had one."

Window Pains.

Moving time brings many a cry of "alas" that the number of windows and the size of them are the same in every house. New curtains are in order. Here's a tip on planning for them. Measure the new windows for width and for length. Then select curtains that will reach just to the sill, or to the edge of the apron below the sill, or, for more formal settings, just to the floor. Be sure that you have plenty of fullness.

Blue for Evening.

Paris (U.P.).—Deep shades of blue are stressed by Chanel for evening wear, seconded by black and white. Coat-dress effects were much in evidence for daytime wear—especially when they had accompanying touches of white pique, organdy or grosgrain. Garlands of flowers became shoulder straps. Bows took the lead in the array of hair ornaments. Lace was starched to make ruffled collars and cuffs that looked like paper doilies.

It seems like everyone's been asking—"When?"

The answer is—TODAY—for our May once-a-month

Half-Price Day! AVERAGE Half Price!

It seems to grow larger as time goes on! This month cool weather has interrupted business and makers have larger surpluses than ever which they are desirous of clearing through Half-Price Day! And our own stocks, too, yield up larger amounts for Half-Price Day disposal.

Prices this month average less than half—they are considerably less in some cases—only a trifle more in others, so big things are in prospect for you. Needless to say . . . "COME EARLY!"

However, we must again ask your co-operation as to credits, refunds, C. O. D.'s, will calls, mail and telephone orders! Supreme Court Families Leave Soon for Summer

Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes to Motor in Europe and Are Leaving Town Tomorrow; Others to Scatter Over the Country.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

With today marking the final session of the Supreme Court this season, justices will doff their robes for the summer this afternoon. Tomorrow, they either will be off on vacation trips or will complete plans for leaving later. By the end of June, chances are you won't be able to find a justice anywhere near Washington, no matter how hard you try.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, who generally spend their vacations motoring in New England, will take to the open road this summer on the other side the Atlantic. While they are not divulging the exact date of departure, they will set sail some time in June. Their European trip is being planned to include extensive motoring, and probably after they return to America late in the summer, they will travel a bit by automobile in New England. Anyway, they will leave Washington tomorrow, and they won't be back until the latter part of September.

Associate Jusitce James Clark McReynolds always heads for his home in Elkton, Ky., shortly after the Supreme Court adjourns. This year will be no exception. Some time this week, he will be off to the blue grass section. According to present plans he will visit friends and relatives in Nashville and his home town, Elkton, Ky. His plans for the remainder of the summer are not complete.

Some time soon Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis and Mrs. Brandeis will close their apartment on California street and will leave for their summer home on Cape Cod. They will be joined late next month by their daughter, Mrs. Jacob H. Gilbert, the former Susan B. Brandeis, and her three children, Louis Brandeis, Alice and Frank, who make their home in New York City.

"No plans made yet," was Mrs. Pierce Butler's reply to the question yesterday as to where she and Associate Justice Butler would spend the summer. They will remain in Washington for several days, completing arrangements for moving out to their 500-acre estate recently purchased in Maryland. Later in the summer when, or if, Justice Butler grows tired of farming, they probably will pack bag and baggage into an automobile and be off to Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., for a brief visit. They spent most of their vacation there last year.

Stones Plan Canadian Visit

Associate Justice and Mrs. Harland Fisk Stone will leave June 8 for a trip to California, going from there to Jasper Park, Canada, for a few weeks. While Mrs. Stone doesn't know whether she will find time to paint on her trip, she always takes along her brushes "just in case." Some time in August Justice and Mrs. Stone will return East, going to their cottage in Maine to spend the remainder of the summer.

Associate Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts moved some time ago from their Washington home to their farm in Chester County, Pa., where their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, and Charles Hamilton, of Green Farms, Conn., will be married on June 4. Justice and Mrs. Roberts always spend vacations there. Called Bryn Coed (Welsh for "wooded top of the hill"), their farm has extensive gardens and orchards, and a dairy. Justice Roberts enjoys helping with the lighter work around his farm, and during most vacation seasons, he is a familiar figure on the road to the nearest town, Phoenixville, to which he frequently drives his own station wagon.

If his health continues to improve, Associate Justice Benjamin Cardoza, who has been ill for some months, will be able to spend part of his vacation time in his home in White Plains, N. Y., where he has been for many summers.

Vacation plans for Associate Justice and Mrs. Hugo L. Black have not yet been divulged. Friends report that they are planning another trip to Europe, following a brief visit with friends and relatives in Alabama. Other rumors have it that the Blacks will spend the entire summer at their air-conditioned home, Cranford, on Seminary Hill near Alexandria.

Mrs. Reed Is Still in Kentucky

Associate Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed have not yet decided where they will be during the summer. Mrs. Reed is now in Maysfield, Ky., where she went recently following the death of her father, James W. Elgin. She is expected to return to Washington in about ten days.

While their goings and comings no longer are regulated by sessions of the Supreme Court, the two retired justices, Willis Van Devanter and George Sutherland, have spent the entire winter and most of the spring in Washington. A few days ago Former Justice and Mrs. Sutherland left for Europe, where they will be for several weeks. They will return to Washington in September.

Meanwhile, former Justice Van Devanter has been completing arrangements to move from his apartment on Connecticut avenue to his 788-acre farm near Ellicott City, Md. He spent most of yesterday out there and will be moving the latter part of this week. He will be there most of the summer with the exception of a brief interval when he plans a trip to Canada, where he spends part of each vacation season at the Seignory Club.

SOCIETY GO-ROUND: Mrs. Chauncey Depew will leave today for New York where she will spend a few days at the Plaza before sailing on the Europa. She will be in Europe most of the summer, returning to Washington about the middle of September . . . Among those sailing on the Aquitania tomorrow will be the Countess of Suffolk, who will be at her home in England through June, July and August. A sister of the late Joseph Leiter, the Countess of Suffolk has spent the past four months at her winter home in Arizona . . . Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, who, with Mrs. Stimson, spent some time here early in the spring at Washington estate, Woodley, will receive an honorary degree from Hamilton College on June 13. He and Mrs. Stimson are now at Highold, their farm at West Hills, Long Island. The degree of doctor of laws is to be awarded him "for long and valuable service in public life."

New Yorker Visiting Here

Harris & Ewing.

MISS BARBARA BAINBRIDGE, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Seaman Bainbridge, of Gramercy Park, New York City, is the guest of Col. and Mrs. Consuelo A. Seaone. A member of the Junior League, Miss Bainbridge also is an accomplished linguist, having studied in Europe and at Vassar College, from which she was graduated last June. The past winter, she made her debut at a large party at Sherry's in New York. She will spend the remainder of the week in Washington, later joining her parents at their summer home in the Berkshires.

Dinner Is Given By J. R. Beams

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Jack R. Beam gave a dinner at the Shoreham last evening in honor of their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Saunders, of Jacksonville, Fla. Mrs. Beam expects to leave with Mr. and Mrs. Saunders and a party of friends on Friday for Norfolk, where they will board a steamship for Florida. Mr. Saunders is president of a steamship line.

Other guests last evening were Dr. and Mrs. Veador Leonard, of Baltimore; Dr. and Mrs. Allen Voschell, Col. and Mrs. William Rose, Col. and Mrs. Howard Davidson, Col. and Mrs. Leslie McDill, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. William O. Ryan, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Hubert R. Harmon, Maj. and Mrs. Clyde L. Hyssong, Mr. and Mrs. M. Eillson Offutt, Mrs. S. William Fitzgerald, Mrs. Jimmie Lou Cooper, of Huntsville, Ala.; Frank Seigle and Larkin Glazebrook, of Wayne, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Woodside entertained at dinner in the Shoreham last evening in honor of Commander and Mrs. Carlton R. Eagle, who are leaving tomorrow for Commander Eagle's new assignment in Honolulu.

Guests at the party were Mr. and Mrs. William H. McReynolds, Mr. and Mrs. John Kennedy and Mr. and Mrs. Harold J. Carow.

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, who spent the week-end with her daughter, Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor, student at the Westover School in Middlebury, Conn., will return to Washington today.

The elder daughter, Miss Adelaide Chatfield Taylor, who is a student at Bryn Mawr College, will make her bow to Washington society Thursday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor plan to spend most of the summer here, but in the autumn they will go to their place in Lake Forest, Ill., for a short vacation.

Drummond-Wolffs To Fete Daughter At London Party

All the way from London comes the news that Mrs. Henry Drummond-Wolff will entertain tomorrow, Derby Day, at a large dinner dance in honor of her daughter, Miss Marsyl Stokes. The event is one of the highlights of Derby week.

Marion Kadin Wed To Richard Klein

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Adams Klein, who were married Sunday afternoon, will be at home after June 10 at 736 Barry avenue, Chicago.

The bride is the former Miss Marion Kadin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barnette Kadin, of 2762 Woodley place. The ceremony took place in the drawing room of her parents' home before an improvised altar with a background of palms, smilax and white flowers. Rabbi Abram Simon officiated.

Mrs. Lester Roth, of New York, the bridegroom's sister, served as matron of honor and Miss Anna Lou Kadin was maid of honor for her sister. Mrs. Roth was attired in floor-length tulle veil. She carried pink sweet peas. Miss Kadin wore pink net and carried a bouquet similar to that of the matron of honor.

Charles A. Fuhrman, of Chicago, was best man and Stanley Kadin was an usher. Max Kadin, 10-year-old brother of the bride, played the wedding march on the violin.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

The Washington representatives of Spain's loyalist cause, headed by Ambassador Fernando de los Rios, have made numerous friends here, chiefly among the intellectuals. There is a lot of sympathy roundabout for all the members of the staff, who are too down about the situation in their own country to do much social gadding except in an official way.

No little anxiety is being felt over the future of Gustavo Pitaluga, who until recently was Second Secretary here. He has been called back to fight in the trenches, and his wife insisted on going with him, even though Washington friends offered her a place to stay here in safety while her husband was at the front.

DUDLEY HARMON

Senor Pittaluga is one of the foremost composers of Spain. His newest symphony was given a special performance in Mexico City several months ago. The composer and his wife journeyed all the way to the Mexican capital to be present.

• • • •

FOR many months pretty Laura de los Rios, daughter of the Spanish envoy and Senora de los Rios, has wanted to go back to Spain and join with her friends in helping the cause along. Up until recently her parents absolutely refused to let her go, but now she has obtained their permission and will sail next month for Europe on the Queen Mary.

Senorita Laura de los Rios will make several visits in England and France and then will go to Spain. She will be accompanied by her close friend, Senorita Maria Louisa Caredo, who has been studying at a university in this country. Senorita Caredo's father is a Spanish diplomat.

Washington has seen very little of Laura de los Rios this winter except for occasional week-ends. She has been studying for her doctor's degree at Columbia University, writing a thesis on literature. Her father formerly was president of the University of Madrid; an uncle was a prime mover to further education in Spain, and Senora de los Rios at one time was a teacher. While very intelligent, Laura is far from being a bluestocking either in manner or in appearance.

• • • •

THE FAMILY of Adolphus Andrews, recently named vice admiral in command of the Scouting Fleet, has an inland summer in prospect. Mrs. Andrews, their attractive daughter, Frances, and the younger members of the family will be off the latter part of June to spend several weeks at Eaton's ranch in Wyoming. They have not yet decided where they will be next winter, when Vice Admiral Andrews is transferred for sea duty, but they will return here in the fall when a younger son of the family enters St. Albans.

• • • •

MORE SUMMER PLANS: Mrs. George T. Pettingill, wife of the commandant of the Navy Yard, will be off next month for several visits on Long Island. Her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wagner, have a place in Southampton. Mrs. Pettingill will return here to brave the hot weather until September, when she will go to her home in Connecticut . . . The popular Mrs. Harold Hinton, who is being much feted, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given on Thursday evening by Mrs. Higginson Rogers. Mrs. Hinton will sail June 8 from New York on the President Harding to join Mr. Hinton, who is assistant to Ambassador Kennedy.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

The Argentine Ambassador and Mme. Espil will return tomorrow from a brief stay in New York, where they went yesterday.

• • • •

Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister, will entertain at luncheon tomorrow in honor of Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, who recently returned after a stay of several months in her homeland.

• • • •

The United States Minister to Guatemala, Fay Des Portes, has had as his guests at the Mayflower, his niece, Miss Sarah Des Portes, of Winnsboro, S. C., and Miss Harriet Perkins, of Columbia, S. C. The young ladies are now attending June week festivities in Annapolis.

• • • •

MRS. J. J. SOUTHERLAND.

Chaplain Officiates at Her Wedding to James Southerland.

The historic Naval Academy Chapel at Annapolis was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Sally Berkeley Crenshaw, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Russel S. Crenshaw, to James Julian Southerland, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Southerland, of Miami. Chaplain Rosso, of the U. S. S. York, officiated.

The old chapel was entirely decorated with masses of white flowers, and the altar was banked with ferns and palms. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white net frock made with a full skirt and a fishtail train. Her veil was attached to a halo of heirloom lace trimmed with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

The maid of honor was her sister, Miss Alice Crenshaw, who wore a gold net frock made with puffed sleeves and a full skirt, and a gold veil fastened with aquamarine flowers. The bridesmaids were the Misses Martha Lee Bowman, Long Beach, Calif.; Betsy Lammers, Newport, R. I.; Lucy Lane Kelly, of Norfolk; Mrs. Hayden Clemens, Richmond, Va.; Carol Southerland, of Miami, and Margaret Paine. They were gowned in aquamarine frocks made like that of the maid of honor, with similar veils attached to gold flowers, and carried mixed spring bouquets.

Thomas Southerland was best man, and the ushers were Francis Nelson Crenshaw, William Southerland and Ensigns William Robbins Crenshaw, Edward Dougherty, Richard Burns, Bert Hardin, Thomas Henry and James McFadden.

A reception at the home of Commander and Mrs. Victor Wiley in Annapolis followed the ceremony. The receiving line stood in front of a fireplace banked with palms.

Mrs. R. H. Smith Due Tomorrow

Mrs. Robert Hays Smith, of San Francisco, who has been the guest of Miss Elsa Maxwell at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York for several days, will arrive in Washington tomorrow. She is coming to attend the marriage of her son, Nichol Smith and Miss Moira Archbold, which is expected to take place Thursday at the home of the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Anne Archbold.

The wedding, originally set for Thursday, May 26, was postponed a week. The Rev. George C. St. John will officiate in the presence of a small company. Following the wedding, the bridegroom's mother will return to New York for an extended visit.

Visiting over Sunday and yesterday with Senator James J. Davis and Mrs. Davis were Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, of Indianapolis.

Mrs. Davis, who has had a busy week-end, "teamed up" with Senator Hattie Carraway, of Arkansas, in a joint radio broadcast Saturday evening. They both spoke on behalf of the Amelia Earhart Foundation, recently formed, for which Mrs. Davis is serving as chairman of the group's Washington committee.

Miss Addison's Wedding Today

Miss Savilla Gamble, of Washington, will be a bridesmaid at the wedding tomorrow in Annapolis of Miss Virginia Pearl Addison, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Edward Shanley Addison, of that place, to Norman Hansen Ball, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Zabriskie Ball, of Norfolk, Va.

The ceremony will be performed at 5 o'clock at St. Anne's Episcopal Church, the Rev. Edward Darlington Johnson officiating. A small reception for the bridal party and members of the immediate families will follow at Ponemah, the home of the bride's parents on South River.

Mrs. Edward Spencer Addison, of Norfolk, sister-in-law of the bride, will serve as matron of honor, and Miss Virginia Duvall, of Fresno, Calif., will be a bridesmaid.

Lieut. Edward Spencer Addison, of the U. S. S. Wyoming, brother of the bride, will be best man, and the ushers include Lieuts. Charles A. Legg, Carter A. Printup, Thurlow W. Davidson and Glenn R. Hartwig.

Convent Group To Gather Here

From all points of the compass members of the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae Association are coming to Washington for commencement and their own annual festivities.

Mrs. A. R. Ludlow, of Mill Neck, Long Island, founder of the New York Chapter of the alumnae association, and Mrs. John Bower, jr., of Hagerstown, will be the guests of Mrs. Joseph Leiter. The three were classmates. Miss Christabel Hill, treasurer of the association, will have Mrs. John Page Casper, of Hancock, Md., and Mrs. Robert Goldsmith, of Baltimore, as her guests. Mrs. Edgar Murdock will have as her guest Mrs. Owen Perry, of Helena, Mont., and Miss Edith Heiskell is entertaining her classmate, Mrs. Frank McHugh, of Wilmington.

Mrs. Leiter, president of the association, will preside at the annual alumnae banquet to be given at Sulgrave Club Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Friday morning the annual business meeting will be held at the convent, and later the members will be guests at the annual luncheon given by the Sisters of the Visitation.

Miss Phelps Bridal Set for Tomorrow

One of the very first June brides of the season will be Miss Beatrice Phelps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Phelps of Washington, who will be married at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning to James Francis McCarthy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. McCarthy, of this city.

The ceremony will be performed at the Sacred Heart Church, the Rev. Lawrence Wempe officiating, and will be followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents, 1318 Kenyon street.

Miss Louise Phelps will serve as her sister's maid of honor, and the Misses Gladys T. Jones and Martha Corwin will be bridesmaids. Robert McCarthy, brother of the bridegroom, will be best man.

D. A. R. Plans Library On Revolution's History

Mrs. Robert Inaugurates Golden Anniversary Project, Urges Individual Chapters to Formulate Local Programs.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Creation of a library on the history of the Revolutionary period and a document room to contain it will be the golden jubilee project of the national society, Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, announces the plan in her first message to the society, appearing in the June issue of the National Historical Magazine, just off the press.

Mrs. Robert has spent about four days a week in her office at Memorial Continental Hall since the Forty-seventh Continental Congress, at which she was elected head of the D. A. R. It is a full-time job, she says, requiring the same application from its chief executive as would a great business concern.

Looking ahead to the fiftieth anniversary of the society, she has not only announced a project for the national organization, decided on by the board of management, but has called on individual chapters throughout the country to decide on an anniversary plan suited to their own communities the benefits of which "may reach beyond our own membership to bless our fellow citizens."

Mrs. Robert cautions the chapters to set a goal they can accomplish and at the same time meet their other needs and obligations and to consider the permanency of their service. Historical books for local libraries, memorial trees, a granite bench at some historic spot, are among her suggestions.

Mrs. Bockoven Named Press Relations Chairman

Taking over the responsibilities of her office, Mrs. Robert began at once the selection of her national chairmen and vice chairmen of standing committees. Among those who have accepted appointment is Mrs. Sterling Bockoven, of Washington, as chairman of press relations. For the past year, Mrs. Bockoven has been publicity chairman for the District of Columbia D. A. R., handling the work for the 60 chapters in the District, and she also assisted in the press department at the time of the Continental Congress.

Others who have accepted include Mrs. John Y. Richardson, of Portland, Oreg., former reporter general to the Smithsonian Institution, who will serve as chairman of the Americanism committee; Mrs. Samuel Campbell, of Mount Carroll, Ill., as chairman of the Approved Schools committee, and two national chairmen of the former administration who have been reappointed, Dr. Jean Stephenson, of the District of Columbia, genealogical records, and Mrs. Smith Stebbins, of Brooklyn, Ellis Island.

A meeting of the executive committee will be held here this week with members coming from various States to attend. Among them will be Mrs. John S. Beaume, of Ohio; Mrs. William Kennedy Herrin, jr., of Mississippi; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, of Michigan; Miss Page Schwarzwaelder, of New York; Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, Massachusetts; Mrs. Vinton Earl Sision, of Illinois, and Mrs. Willard Steele, of Tennessee. All will attend the exercises at the Naval Academy in Annapolis Wednesday at which Mrs. Robert will present the D. A. R. award, a pair of binoculars, to Midshipman Elmer Dacey, of Biloxi, Miss., for excellence in seamanship.

Speech-Making Claims Attention

Offical functions have already begun to claim a considerable amount of the president general's time. She has had speeches to prepare for delivery in person and greetings to be read on occasions when she cannot be present. She has found it necessary, because of the many duties of her office, to decline most chapter invitations and those of purely social nature.

As soon as the annual directory of committees is issued, she expects to take a short vacation. She plans also to visit during the summer some of the schools supported and officially approved by the D. A. R.

She was unable to spare time at the beginning of her administration to attend the annual Continental Congress of the Sons of the American Revolution, held this year in Dallas, Tex. Her trips so far have been limited to Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Virginia. In mid-September, the State conferences will start and she will attend many of these. In the fall she will visit States in the Mississippi Valley and eastward, and next spring will go to California and the far southwest.

Her immediate speaking engagements include dedications, high school celebrations, and commencements, radio talks on the society's conservation program, and, on June 11, she will address the summer conference of the Delaware State D. A. R. at Rehoboth Beach.

Doll Teas Draw Leading Women To Aid Children

Many prominent women will assist at a series of three doll teas being given this week by the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches. The teas are to be held tomorrow, Thursday and Friday at the federation headquarters, 1749 N street northwest, opposite the clubhouse of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, chairman of the Juvenile Court department of the council, is chairman of arrangements for the teas, which are for the purpose of providing dolls for children living in the Capital's alleys. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, will receive each day; with Mrs. Howerton tomorrow, Mrs. Fannie Foster on Thursday and Mrs. Richard Sauer Friday.

Miss Etta Mai Russell, the "Toy Truck Lady," who is Juvenile Court worker for the Woman's Council, was responsible for inaugurating the "doll adoption" plan last summer. It combines lessons in home-making for the children, with the joy of having dolls they can call their own. This year it is to be extended and many more dolls are needed—hence the teas. Each guest must give a doll, which will join the Toy Truck applicants for "adoption."

In addition to dolls taken by guests there will be a collection including many representing celebrities. Others dressed as natives of different countries and dolls which are 100 years old or more. These will form a permanent collection which will be used by Miss Russell in connection with her work.

Interest in the project is growing steadily. It is sponsored by the Woman's Council as part of the program of its Juvenile Court department to prevent delinquency. As soon as school is dismissed children of the slum districts become a problem because of the lack of facilities for play, said Miss Russell.

Among those who have accepted invitations to pour at one or more of the series of teas are Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, Mrs. Marvin McIntyre, Miss Mary Dewson, Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, president of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, president of the Political Study Club; Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the Women's City Club; Mrs. Edward Montgomery, president of the Twentieth Century Club; Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Mrs. Walter Peter, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of All Souls' Memorial Church; Mrs. H. H. V. Sterrett, wife of the rector of All Souls' Church; Mrs. S. T. Ansell and Miss Janet Lake.

Women's Clubs to See Movies Of Goodwill Industries' Activity

Guild Planning to Open Speakers' Bureau Also; Membership Drive Scheduled in Fall; Projects Give Work to Handicapped.

Movies showing the work of Goodwill Industries will be available to women's clubs of the District for their programs next fall, and speakers to describe the project will be provided through a bureau now under consideration by the Goodwill Guild.

The Guild, of which Mrs. Samuel Herrick has been chairman since its organization a year ago, expects to augment its present membership of 100 before the opening of the autumn season. It holds quarterly business meetings but carries on throughout the year its interest in the various branches of the Goodwill Industries, which give employment to handicapped workers. W. Harold Snape is director.

The purpose of the Guild is to keep before the public the need of the industries for clothing, furniture and other materials to be reconditioned at the plant and prepared for sale. There are 100 on the staff of the organization in Washington, including both men and women whose physical handicaps make it difficult for them to secure employment in commercial establishments. Some are the sole support of families.

Guild to Aid Workers in Illness

The most recent event sponsored by the Guild was the garden fete at Mount Vernon Seminary, which was for the benefit of its newly established emergency sick fund. This has already been drawn upon to supply food for families in which the only wage-earner was employed at Goodwill and was unable to work for a short period because of illness.

Miss Bessie Baker, who is in charge of placement, welfare and personnel, and experienced in welfare work, makes visits to the families when such an emergency arises, determines the need and sees that food is provided for simple, well-balanced meals.

The Guild's first enterprise was the opening of an antique shop in a house adjoining the main plant of Goodwill Industries. It was started before Christmas. Articles culled from donations which were suitable for an antique store were assembled and, as Guild members became interested and told their friends, more material of this kind was sent in.

A book shop also has been opened at 1421 Pennsylvania avenue and the Guild plans to interest clubs which devote their study to literature in contributing books and magazines to this branch of the Goodwill project.

Goodwill Provides Club for Boys

Another activity which has been made possible by the Goodwill Industries through co-operation in providing a meeting place is a new Boys' Club in the neighborhood. It has been organized by William Perry, one of the workers, and has 50 members. Mr. Perry meets with the boys every night from 7 to 9:30 in the sub-basement of the building, which they have whitewashed and converted into a clubroom, furnace and all.

The Guild, which is similar to those organized in other cities where Goodwill Industries operate, will adopt by-laws at its first meeting in the fall. Mrs. Karl Fenning, who is a member of the board of trustees, is chairman of the by-laws committee, with Mrs. W. W. Husband, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. LaVerne Beales, and Mrs. Basil Manly the other members.

Many Prominent Women Included

There are three women members of the board of trustees, of which Col. William O. Tufts is president. These, in addition to Mrs. Sears, are Mrs. Fenning, former president of the Twentieth Century Club, and Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, all active also in the Guild.

Several of the Guild members are also on the advisory council, of which Mrs. Roosevelt is an honorary member. These include Mrs. Herrick, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who is vice chairman of the Guild; Mrs. Husband, Mrs. Howard Nichols, Mrs. John W. Guider and Mrs. J. K. McClintock.

Mrs. Arthur Seaton has served as secretary for the Guild, Mrs. Elmer S. Frazier, treasurer; the Misses Clara and Gertrude Lust have been chairmen of decorations for the style show, the opening of the antique shop, and the spring fete, and Mrs. T. W. Marshall has been chairman of hospitality for these affairs. All of the other members have given co-operation. Among them have been Mrs. Harlee Branch, Mrs. W. C. VanVleck, Mrs. Ellery Stowell, Miss Clara Opper, Miss Lycia Fox, Mrs. J. Brent Clark, Mrs. J. J. Cotter, Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, Mrs. Bancroft Davis, Mrs. Francis M. Goodwin, Mrs. L. H. Macomber, Mrs. Lawrence Martin, Mrs. George Ward, Mrs. Richard Stimson, Mrs. Richard Herzog, Mrs. Chesley Manly and Mrs. Gene Robb.

Mrs. Britton Heads Memorial Society

Mrs. Norma Hardy Britton, prominent women attorney of the District, has been elected president of the Mary Taliaferro Thompson Branch of the Confederated Southern Memorial Association, which is the oldest of all Confederate associations.

Other officers elected in addition to Mrs. Britton are Mrs. Henry Gordon Clay, first vice president; Mrs. R. L. Ettenger, second vice president; Mrs. Anne E. Howell, third vice president; Mrs. Fred Louis Volland, recording secretary; Miss Susan Upshur Sneed, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Walter L. Phares, treasurer; Mrs. Cora Tally, historian; Mrs. Samuel Kellog Miller, registrar; Mrs. Wallace Streeter, parliamentarian; Mrs. Elton O. Pillow, chaplain.

Miss Susan Upshur Sneed was elected a delegate to the next national convention, which will be held in Columbia, S. C., in June. Mrs. Britton has been the color bearer for the national president, Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, for many years.

Sorority Group Ends Conclave In the Capital

Mrs. Johnson Presides as National Chairman at Final Sessions.

Beta Gamma Phi, national non-academic sorority, closed its fifteenth annual three-day convention yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Dorothy Johnson, a former resident of Baltimore, now living in Washington, presided as national president.

The sorority was started 15 years ago in the Capital by a group of young girls who organized first as a club. Only one of the original members, Miss Florence Padgett, is still active in the society. She was a member of the committee in charge of arrangements for the convention, of which Miss Louise Metrailer was chairman. Others assisting were Miss Evelyn Farr, Miss Norine Mulgannon, Mrs. Eloise Gould, Miss Helen Phillips, Miss Ruth Hartung and Miss Margaret Fowler.

Nearly 100 members of the sorority from the five chapters in Washington, the five in Baltimore, three in New York City and those in nearby Virginia attended the convention. It opened Saturday with registration in the afternoon, followed by a buffet supper and dance, a spaghetti luncheon on Sunday, a cocktail party that afternoon and a banquet and dance Sunday night. Yesterday, following a breakfast, the members devoted themselves to business.

Two new chapters have been taken in during the past year, Gamma, of Baltimore, and Phi Pi, of Washington, of which Miss Thelma Zier is president. Other local chapters are Alpha, Omega, Zeta and Kappa.

National officers, in addition to Mrs. Johnson, include: Miss Ellen Haguist, of Brooklyn, vice president; Mrs. Virginia Wilkinson, of Baltimore, secretary; Miss Norine Mulgannon, of Washington, treasurer, and Mrs. Jeanette Struck, of Washington, sergeant at arms.

Mrs. Lowdermilk To Speak on China

"The Sino-Japanese Conflict as I Have Seen It Over a Period of 22 Years" will be the subject of a talk tonight by Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk in the chapel of the Methodist Building. It is to be given under the sponsorship of the International Relations Department of the District of Columbia Federation of Churches, of which Mrs. Jennie Esmond Wright is chairman.

Mrs. Lowdermilk and her husband, now associate chief of soil conservation for the Department of Agriculture, spent 22 years in the Orient and have an intimate knowledge of conditions there. Dr. Lowdermilk will be present and both he and his wife will answer questions following her talk.

A silver offering will be taken at the close of the program, all of which will go to the fund to aid Chinese war refugees.

Health Parley For Nation to Open July 18

President's Committee Will Sponsor Three-Day Citizens Conference.

A citizens' conference to consider major needs of the Nation in health and medical care will open here July 18 under auspices of the President's Interdepartmental Committee to Co-ordinate Health and Welfare Activities, it was announced yesterday.

Called at the suggestion of the President, the conference will continue through July 20, according to Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the committee. Invitations, she said, have been sent to approximately 100 men and women representing medical and other professions, labor, agriculture and groups interested in providing medical services.

"The National Health Conference," said Miss Roche, "is planned as a working conference. To provide the best opportunity for frank discussion, it is necessary to limit the number of participants, but the Interdepartmental Committee hopes that they will be truly representative of the general public as well as of the professional groups."

The conference will follow nearly 3 years of preliminary work by the committee, appointed by President Roosevelt August 15, 1935. In addition to Miss Roche, members of the committee are Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board; Milburn L. Wilson, Undersecretary of Agriculture; Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Charles V. McLaughlin, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Headstone of Dog Stolen in Illinois

Pana, Ill., May 30 (AP).—The headstone marking the grave of "Towdy," a pet dog whose burial in a local cemetery caused a furore among owners of other lots, was missing today.

Sexton Adam Heddrick said the stone, placed over the grave by Mrs. Amy Adams of Moweaqua, apparently had been stolen Friday or Saturday. Judge John H. Fornoff, member of the cemetery board, said directors had issued an "ultimatum" that the dog's body must be removed "within a reasonable time."

All U. S. Export Meat Sought in Case of War

London, May 30 (U.P.).—The British government is negotiating with the United States and South American countries on a plan whereby, in event of Britain's becoming involved in war, she would purchase the entire export production of meat from those countries, it was understood today. The negotiations are a part of the government's program for storing emergency supplies of foodstuffs.

Organization News

John J. Carmody, grand commander of Alcantara Caravan, Order of the Alhambra, has issued final instructions for the "Ceremonial" or initiation, which is to be held at the Willard Hotel next Sunday afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock.

Candidates for this initiation have been requested to assemble in the Willard Hotel at 12 o'clock noon, where they will receive final instructions from John O. Allen, scribe of the exchequer. Candidates from the local caravan will be joined by newly elected members of Alcala Caravan, of Baltimore. John M. O'Neill, grand commander of Alcala Caravan, will be in charge of the Baltimore neophytes.

The initiation will be under the direction of Walter E. Kennedy, deputy supreme commander for Delaware. He will be assisted by a group of officers from the Baltimore caravan.

Following the initiation there will be a banquet and dance in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel at 7 o'clock. Supreme Commander of the Order of Alhambra John M. Miller, of Baltimore, will be the guest of honor. He will be entertained by local Caravan officers. It is expected many members of the order from nearby Maryland and Virginia will be in attendance.

During the conferring of the degrees the ladies will be entertained by a local committee on reception. A sightseeing trip and luncheon is being arranged. Mrs. John J. Carmody is general chairman of this committee.

Master of the Oasis John Bernard Coyle is in charge of the entertainment of members and their ladies at the evening affair. Francis A. McCann, grand scribe of Alcantara Caravan, is secretary of the committee on membership and James P. McKeon is general chairman.

The annual convention of the State Council of the District of Columbia will be held in the local clubhouse tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock. State Deputy Walter I. Plant will preside and will read a report of his activities of the past year. The Right. Rev. Msgr. Eugene J. Connelly, State chaplain, will offer the invocation and will be one of the principal speakers.

The following officers and delegates will sit at the convention: Past State Deputy George E. Herring, State Secretary Edward L. Tucker, State Treasurer Manning J. Wilcoxon, State Advocate Alfred A. McGarraghy, State Warden William A. Mulligan, Carmine Garofalo and Julian T. Cromelin, Washington Council; Francis J. Rafferty and Dr. George R. Ellis, Keane Council; Joseph A. O'Connell and John P. Dunn, Carroll Council; Francis J. Malloy and Thomas F. Carlin, Spalding Council; Charles J. Considine and William G. Feely. Each council is represented by the Grand Knight and a Past Grand Knight.

W. Gordon Bell, secretary, executive committee of the District of Columbia, has secured the Northeast Masonic Temple for the meeting of the assembly of the National Union Assurance Society to be held on June 21.

During the meeting of McKinley Council, No. 992, delegates elected were Richard A. Walker, Thomas A. Green, and Edward C. Walker. The alternates are William J. O'Brien, Garland P. Webb, and William C. Carey. Four candidates for senator, Michael J. Kindsfather, Potomac Council; William J. O'Brien, McKinley; John A. Marshall, Scott, and Samuel Trupp, Victory, spoke regarding their qualifications to represent the Washington jurisdiction at the senate sessions to be held in Toledo, Ohio, during the week of July 18.

Chairman Richard A. Walker presided at the meeting of the executive board. The representatives from the councils were Senator Michael J. Kindsfather, Walter T. Roche, Henry J. Frank, Potomac; Senator William J. O'Brien, Garland P. Webb, McKinley; Senator John A. Marshall, Scott; Melvin D. Newland, Emery F. Weightman, United; Harry O. Clem, Central; Clarence M. Mitchell, Congressional, and Samuel Trupp, Victory.

Letter to 'Your Congressman' Is Delivered in D. C. on Time

When you want some information about the Government or when you don't like a certain tax bill—the advice usually is write "your Congressman." And if some people take that advice literally, that's O. K. by the Postoffice Department.

A couple of days ago one of Representative C. E. Hancock's constituents in up-State New York was told to "write your Congressman" when she wanted some information about raising chickens.

Later, Representative Hancock received a letter from his constituent addressed "Your Congressman, Washington, D. C." Postal authorities, undaunted, looked at the cancellation stamp, noted the name of the town, consulted a Congressional directory to see what district the letter came from and forwarded the letter—on time.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CAVIAR: When he's away from home, Jim Farley invariably long-distances his little son every day at 7 p. m. . . . The President's two aides, Early and McIntyre, once worked in the same office as young journalists . . . That nasty story about the Justice's wife who said jestingly that he hadn't opened a law book in 15 years was peddled assiduously as a "straight confession"—by the host of the luncheon party where she told it.

Jim Farley . . . phones sonny.

Best definitions of Washington I've heard yet: America's county seat . . . Next best: Slapstick in a dramatic setting . . . Third best: The town where today's light gossip will be appealed to the Supreme Court next session.

• • • •

This spring, in the Capital, the shibboleth, the acid test, of a genuine New Dealer is whether or not he enthuses about the Labor Relations Board . . . He mustn't merely swallow it with a grimace; he must enthuse about it, or he hasn't really experienced the Revelation.

"—if a corporation is a person"

If a corporation is a person, as the Supreme Court has ruled, under the fourteenth amendment, then one of Washington's legal wits has a solution for the Republicans' quandary about a Presidential candidate in 1940:

"Why not run a corporation for President?

"It would be a splendid fight in the convention," he says, "between U. S. Steel and General Motors. Whichever corporation wins could move its board of directors into the White House."

GILT OFF THE DOME: Tommy Corcoran (the White House accordionist) doesn't wear undershirts . . . One Senator is threatening to sue a magazine which called him a "doddering old fool" . . . He's a Southern Senator, very proud . . . Senatorial wives are kidding Mrs. Pepper, of Florida, because she made a speech at a luncheon about her husband being "re-elected" to the Senate—when he's merely renominated . . . Justice Reed carried his own tray in the Supreme Court cafeteria the other day.

A strange, an almost incredible phenomenon in Congress is the scarcity of red-haired members . . . Maybe that's what is wrong in Congress . . . Cochran, of Missouri, is perhaps the most conspicuous redhead in the House; and Ham Lewis is the only one in the Senate . . . There's a theory that half the bald-heads used to be redheads; but it's too late to confirm it.

If you want to make a genuine New Dealer mad (or John L. Lewis or Lee Pressman, his Cardinal Richelieu, for that matter) all you need to say is that the NLRB has had halitosis since a Michigan mechanic who ducked a fellow workman in a barrel of liquid rubber and was therefore canned, was, under the Wagner act, ordered reinstated with some $1,500 back pay. That's all you need to say.

Justice Black these days is a miracle of reticence and discretion . . . He is an engaging, easy conversationalist, but when the talk swerves around to the Supreme Court he shuts up like a clam; he will talk amiably about almost anything else.

On the Supreme Court bench he has not seemed to be noticeably happy or comfortable; he seems self-conscious, aware of the attention of the audiences, and of the stories about his colleagues' views of his work.

Off the bench he reverts to his old easy, senatorial self.

Among Westerners on the Hill the legend persists that the New England members are ultra-conservative, Tory, reactionary . . . New Englanders themselves (like Senator Lodge) feel this is a myth . . . They feel that under the traditional New England reserve the liberal, rebellious tradition of Samuel Adams and William Lloyd Garrison still persists; that the spark of freedom, the belief in equality, still burns in Boston's Back Bay aristocrats.

East Lacking Sufficient Protection, Maverick Warns in Plea.

New York City is defended against aerial assault by three 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, while London is protected by nearly 900 such weapons, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, said yesterday.

Urging provision of additional anti-aircraft weapons, the fiery Texan, who served in France during the World War, declared, "we have never recovered from our overseas complex.

"Some day, we will have to stop building battleships, because they are too expensive, and build a more effective defense here on our own ground," he said.

"Increase in Fire Power."

Maverick made his statement while House and Senate conferees were considering the Army appropriation bill in which the Senate has inserted an item of $15,000,000 for the purchase of anti-aircraft material and authorization permitting the War Department to enter into contracts totaling $10,000,000 for the construction of such equipment during the coming year. The War Department program calls for the expenditure of $55,000,000 for seacoast and anti-aircraft defenses over a period of years.

Representative Ross A. Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, one of the House conferees, although reticent to discuss the measure, said yesterday he was for "a proper balance between material and personnel.

"What we want," he stated, "is an increase in fire power. This can best be obtained by improvements and additions to equipment rather than by enlarging the size of the Army."

Although economy-minded House conferees so far are believed to have refused acceptance of the Senate amendments, observers are convinced a majority of the members of the lower chamber are in favor of the defense move.

East Lacks Protection.

Explaining that it would be a financial and military impossibility to provide "adequate" anti-aircraft defense for every important locality in the country, Maverick declared the Senate proposals will permit development of a mobile anti-aircraft and seacoast defense.

"If we had proper seacoast defense and communications systems," he explained, "we then could have railroad artillery, and a few hundred anti-aircraft guns which could be moved from place to place to meet impending attacks." At the present time, he pointed out, the United States has less than a hundred 3-inch anti-aircraft guns.

The West Coast and the South Atlantic and Gulf shores are in a better defensive position today than the highly industrialized Eastern seaboard, he asserted.

Army officials long have been of the opinion that the existing four regiments for anti-aircraft defense are insufficient. The Senate measur will permit acquisition of sufficient ordnance, searchlights and sound locators for finding planes at night or in conditions of poor visibility, to provide for 30 additional regiments. The House bill carries funds for only ten more units.

Seen Boon to Industry.

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring last week emphasized that fund for anti-aircraft and seacoast defense would flow into nearly every major industry in the country. He also pointed out that money for harbor defenses would be spent at various points throughout the United States, Hawaii and the Panama Canal Zone.

The need for such defenses is deemed especially pressing by military authorities, because of the inability of defending planes to protect military objectives from demolition by aerial attacks.

In the General Headquarters Air Force maneuvers in New England several weeks ago, giant bombers attacked and "destroyed" two aircraft factories, an airfield and a railroad junction at Farmingdale, Long Island, during a "blackout" despite the efforts of small anti-aircraft units.

Pursuit planes, in the sham night attack, were unable to get in the air in time to prevent the attacking bombers from "laying their eggs" on their objectives.

Aid to Navy's Fleet.

Asserting that "since we are going to spend billions on the Navy, we certainly can afford to spend 30, 40 or 50 millions on anti-aircraft and seacoast defenses," Maverick pointed out that one of the prime reasons for such provisions is to permit the fleet to get to sea.

"The Navy can't go out in the oceans unless the shore is safe," he declared. "It can't get out of the harbors unless shore batteries give it some protection and aid during the operation. Furthermore, an opposing fleet could come in close to American seaports and 'bang away' at them unless proper shore batteries and anti-aircraft defenses are provided.

"Essentially, it all boils down to the fact that we can't build a Navy big enough to fill the whole ocean, and, therefore, will have to build for defense here at home," he said.

Gideons Meeting June 11.

Chums Rescue Boy From Pit At Glen Echo

Billy Cone, 13, Injured in 10-Foot Plunge at School Outing.

Knocked unconscious when he plunged nearly ten feet into a darkened pit in Glen Echo Amusement Park yesterday, 13-year-old William Cone, 1340 F street northeast, was rescued by two junior high school classmates who dragged the bleeding boy to safety after a 10-minute struggle.

The boys, all students of the eighth grade class of the Eliot Junior High School, arrived at the amusement park early to enjoy a class outing. Deciding to "explore" the darkness under the midway section of the park, Cone led his friends, Howard Miller, 15, 1315 Holbrook street northeast, and William T. Adreon, 15, 1307 Holbrook street northeast, on the trip.

"It was pitch-black dark," Miller said, "and Billy Cone was leading. I turned to see if William was still with us, and when I looked ahead again, Billy was gone. We called him and looked around until we found a big hole about 8 or 10 feet deep.

"We could hardly see, but thought we saw something white like Billy's trousers. I climbed down in the hole and found him lying near a big rock—his head was bleeding and he didn't move when I touched him."

Propping the injured boy against the wall of the hole, Miller stretched his arms upward until Adreon could reach them from above. Climbing out of the hole he and Adreon finally managed to pull the unconscious youth from the pit. Enlisting the aid of an unidentified man, the boys took Cone to the first aid station in the park where an ambulance was summoned.

At Providence Hospital, Cone was found to have suffered a possible fracture of the skull. His condition was described as "serious, but improving."

Bass Bite Greedily As D. C. Season Opens

Men, women and small boys lined the Tidal Basin from dawn until nightfall yesterday as park police declared the bass fishing season open. They were biting, too.

Largest bass yesterday was caught by Miss Helen Barney, 2500 I street northwest. She landed a large mouth that weighted 4½ pounds.

735 Are Blind In D.C.; 70 Have Regular Jobs

Only 12 Are Begging on the Streets, Survey Reveals.

Seventy out of 735 blind residents of the District are fully employed on regular jobs, Miss Stella Plants, blind director of the committee on service to the blind of the Council of Social Agencies, reported yesterday.

Only 12 are begging on the streets, the report states. Approximately 10 per cent of the Washington blind, according to the investigators, are trained and able to work if jobs could be found for them, while 33 others would be employable if properly trained.

Pensions or some other form of relief are being received by 234 victims of blindness, and 218 live in institutions. The remainder of the group surveyed have independent incomes or are supported by relatives.

William McClure Dies in New Jersey

Tomb River, N. J., May 30 (AP).—William McClure, 60, of Washington, said to be affiliated with the Federal Housing Administration, died today in the house of a friend he was visiting.

McClure went bathing yesterday in nearby Seaside Park and today was found dead in bed of a heart attack in the home of George Lichtenstein. His body was taken to New York for burial.

Legion Plans Festival In Va. for June 24-26

Newport News, Va., May 30 (AP).—The third annual American Legion Festival, expected by legion officials to be attended by members from Virginia, the District of Columbia and Maryland, will take place at Colonial Beach, June 24, 25 and 26, according to a letter received today by Stanley S. Garner, Newport News, vice commander of the Virginia department.

4 Civil War Veterans Recall Conflict in Plane Broadcast

"I've been shot at more this morning than I was in the whole Civil War," cracked 92-year-old Maj. Robert E. Wilson yesterday. But the ammunition consisted of photographers' flash bulbs instead of Union bullets and cannon balls.

The heaviest firing took place 5,000 feet above the rolling green hills of Maryland, but there was another sharp photographic barrage when Maj. Wilson and three other Civil War veterans posed by a twin-motored plane at the Washington Airport.

The veterans began their strenuous morning with a flight over Arlington National Cemetery, climaxed by the moment when a bouquet of rose petals and evergreen sprigs was dropped from the plane. Interviewed in the air for a Nation-wide radio broadcast, the old soldiers, two Northern and two Southern, spoke softly of battles three-fourths of a century old.

Sergt. Peter Pierre Smith, now of Washington, who fought for the Confederacy from 1862 to 1865, told of Gettysburg and campaigns in the Shenandoah Valley and gave his impressions of Lee and Jackson. Another voice was that of Col. H. C. Rizer, 1461 Belmont street northwest, who enlisted in the Union Army at the age of 16 and rose to command of a regiment in the Army of the Potomac before his twenty-first birthday.

Back on earth, Smith and Rizer, both 94 years old, felt tired and were taken home. But Wilson and William H. Jackson, 95, of New York, were good for another flight and were joined by a battery of cameramen when the airliner pointed northeast toward the site of the crucial battle of the Civil War.

Plans to circle over Gettysburg were abandoned, however, and the veterans had to settle for Frederick, Md. The country below looked familiar to Jackson, who marched up from Virginia through Maryland in the summer of 1863. With the last Union brigade to reach Gettysburg, Jackson's regiment was assigned to duty behind the battle lines.

Wilson, who lives today at 3548 Warder street northwest, did not enlist in the Confederate Army until nine months after Gettysburg, in days when Southern fortunes were low. "It wasn't easy," he recalls, "to get from my home in Prince Georges County in Maryland, across the river, and down behind the Southern lines. I did most of my traveling at night."

Enrolled in the First Maryland Cavalry, Wilson saw action in western Virginia "almost every day" through 1864. He had a horse killed under him, but was never wounded himself. He was still with his company in 1865 when it retreated nine days and nights from Richmond to Appomattox.

3 Swift Holdups By Armed Pair Is Climax of Series

Staging three holdups in rapid succesion, two armed bandits last night climaxed a series of stick-ups and robberies which netted nearly $1,000 over the holiday weekend.

The bandits, believed to have been aided by a third man who drove their car, first entered a store operated by Hyman Zitomer at 225 F street northeast. While one of the robbers covered Zitomer with a gun, the other scooped $5 from the cash register.

Apparently disappointed with the small take at the F street store, the bandits entered the grocery store of Benjamin Kerman, 1037 Second street southwest, and escaped with $10 taken from the cash till and $5 from Kerman's pocket. A few minutes later two men answering the same description held up an ice cream store in the 1900 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest and took $30 from Margaret Moses, store manager.

Louis Rosenburg, manager of a drug store at 7723 Georgia avenue northwest, reported to police that thieves had entered the establishment in the night and taken $900 in cash. George Hicks, manager of a gasoline station in the 2900 block of Georgia avenue northwest, reported that thieves also had entered that place and taken $20.

Pickpockets selected the interior of one of the largest downtown motion-picture theaters as a base of operations yesterday, although three plainclothes policemen were on the premises.

One of them "accidentally" bumped George E. Pruitt, 65, of 5422 Cathedral avenue northwest, and gave him a severely bruised back while an accomplice lifted his "roll"—$38.

The theft occurred about 1 p. m. as Pruitt was trying to find a seat in the darkened theater. He was unable to give police a description of the men.

Cumberland Divorce.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., May 30.—Mrs. Dorothy Cleo Huntzberry sued William Howard Huntzberry, of Baltimore, for divorce here, charging that he deserted her May 6, 1935. They were married April 22 of that year in Clearspring, Md.

Cop Too Strenuous For His Pants Now Is Back in Heavies

Motorcycle Policeman C. A. Scott last night found it necessary to wear winter pants in defiance of police regulations. His entire supply of summer trousers—three pairs—was put out of commission in line of duty.

The first pair went out at the knees when he tackled a shoplifting suspect at Tenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northeast Saturday night. Pair No. 2 went on the unfit list after he waded through mud and underbrush to recover a stolen car at Trinidad avenue and Raum street northeast Sunday night.

Yesterday he ripped the last pair arresting 19 colored youths in connection with thefts of foodstuffs from the Pennsylvania Railroad yards.

Police Hold Youth In $877 Robbery

A colored delivery boy was held last night in connection with robbery of the Petworth Pharmacy, 7723 Georgia avenue northwest. Louis Rosenberg, 401 Alliston street northwest, proprietor, said thieves entered through a rear door and took $858.63 from a strong box and $18.95 from the cash register.

Two at Williamsport Held in Liquor Case

Williamsport, Md., May 30.—Charles Rockwell, 54, and Chester Stumbaugh, 33, seized yesterday by Federal investigators, face a hearing tomorrow before United States Commissioner D. Angle Wolfinger at Hagerstown on a charge of setting up an unlicensed still.

Alcorn Assails 'Misstatement' In Pension Row

Denies Federal Employes Are Blocking Liberal Retirement Plan.

A "gross misstatement of facts" was the term applied by Robert H. Alcorn yesterday to the recent statement of Henry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, that Federal employes themselves are blocking liberalized retirement legislation by demanding more than Congress is willing to give.

Alcorn, chairman of a joint conference on retirement composed of Government-employe organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, declared, "If anyone is responsible for the blocking, it's the commission."

"The employes are willing to support a plan to amend the retirement law which will cost the Government much less than the plan recommended by the commission," he said.

Mitchell, in an address before a joint convention of the Postmaster Association and postal groups of Florida at St. Petersburg, Sunday night, said the employes proposal for retirement after 30 years' service, irrespective of age, "is quite impractical, at least for the present."

The civil service president explained the commission's plan for either voluntary or compulsory retirement at the age of 60 for any employe with 30 years' service. The system would not cost the Government more than $5,000,000 additional annually, he said, because the greater cost occasioned by earlier retirement would be offset by the later retirement of others.

"Employes apparently have been inclined to insist on the right of optional retirement at lower wages for themselves, but protest against giving the Government the right to retire them at these proposed lower age limits," Mitchell declared.

"The commission is quite convinced that such an arrangement would work to the disadvantage of the Government. Those who would retire at the earlier age would generally be persons who could better themselves in private business. On the other hand, the Government would practically be forced to keep on the pay roll those who had become inefficient as a result of the earlier encroachment of age."

Enterprise Jails Numbers Suspect

Enterprise, nearly as much as the nature of his business, landed 64-year-old Joseph R. Shields, colored, of the 300 block of McClain avenue southwest, in jail yesterday.

The charge on the police blotter is operating a lottery and possessing lottery slips. Police said there might have been no charge, but for the fact that Shields, finding "business" slack over the holiday, had gone on a house-to-house canvass for customers.

In fact, according to Sergt. George Deyoe and vice squad detectives who arrested Shields, he finally made a "play" with them. Police said they confiscated nearly 100 alleged "numbers" slips and found marked money in his possession when they searched him at headquarters.

Fascists Seek Atlantic Base, Wise Asserts

Democracies Owe Debt to Spain's Loyalists, Says Rabbi's Son.

Republican Spain's "magnificent resistance" has held up for two years a Fascist-international offensive against world democracy," James Waterman Wise, recently returned from loyalist Spain, yesterday told an audience of 300 persons in the Willard Hotel.

The son of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise charged that Mussolini and Hitler instigated the revolt against the Spanish government in July, 1936, because they needed Atlantic bases before they could launch an attack upon all democratic nations.

"The cause of Spanish freedom is the cause of Jewish freedom," Wise declared before an audience consisting chiefly of delegates to the National Conference of Jewish Welfare.

Urge Lifting of Embargo.

At the conclusion of the meeting, which was sponsored by the Social Workers Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy, a resolution was adopted urging the American Government to lift the embargo on arms for Spain.

The resolution declared an "unjust and unneutral embargo" has "given aid and comfort to the warmongering nations who have defied the nonintervention agreement, supplied unlimited arms to the rebels and, themselves, invaded Spain."

Claiming that fascism and anti-semitism are inseparable, Wise termed Spain "a focal point of resistance to attacks on democracy, and hence on Jews, everywhere. The advancement of democracy through social and socialist concepts is the Jew's only hope of survival."

Praises Madrid Defenders.

"The greatest possible contribution to the cause of permanent world peace, greater than that of the peace societies, is being made today by the men manning the defenses of Madrid," he concluded.

George Pershing, nephew of Gen. John J. Pershing, appealing for aid to the children of government Spain, said the loyalist armies "are defending our very homes."

At an earlier session yesterday Dr. Samuel Dinin, registrar of Teachers Institute, Jewish Theological Seminary, was elected president of the National Council for Jewish Education, one of the three Jewish groups in convention at the Willard for the past five days. Samuel Shair, executive director of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, of Scranton, Pa., was chosen president of the National Association of Jewish Center Workers.

Officers of the National Conference of Jewish Social Welfare will be named at the final session of the allied groups today.

Va. Bachelor, 81, Leaves $34,000 to Those Kind to Him

Bristol, Va., May 30 (AP).—John Palmer, 81-year-old bachelor, who died in a boarding house here May 18, divided in his will $34,000 among approximately 50 persons, including a washwoman, bankers, a policeman, lawyers, a bank stenographer, ministers, a railroad fireman and the nurse who served him in his last illness.

Friends said he carried a small notebook in which he jotted the names of those who did him favors.

Palmer directed that his executor, the First National Bank of Bristol, pay the bequests as promptly as possible.

"Some of the beneficiaries of this will are growing old," he explained.

Graduation at Elkins.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Elkins, W. Va., May 30.—Graduation exercises of St. Brendan's School were held last night in St. Brendan's Catholic Church. The Very Rev. Paul D. Othling presented diplomas to Johnny Chambers, Dominic Graziani, Eugene Hammer, Joseph Madden, Robert Maxwell and Madeline Varchetto.

Young Players Are Recruited To Act Selves

By Frederick C. Othman.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Hollywood, May 30 (U.P.).—Two boys, too young yet to realize the almost incredibly good fortune which has been theirs, romped in the M. G. M. Studio today—with more good luck to come.

Eight months ago 7-year-old Andrew and his brother, James, a year older, were dirty-faced urchins in a squalid cabin in the Kentucky hills, the worst example of rural slum children.

Today they're such handsome, well-mannered boys, so gay and affectionate and intelligent that they have been retained for stellar parts in the John W. Considine production, "Boys Town."

"They have surprised me," said their mentor, the Rev. Edward J. Flanagan. "I don't like to talk about them as they were only last September. Today, well, they're both little angels. All they needed was a home—and love."

Father Flanagan is the founder of the internationally famous Boys Town, Nebr., an unique orphanage he established 10 miles west of Omaha, where his charges elect their own mayor, govern themselves with laws of their own devising, and grow into men of whom the only father they know is inordinately proud.

The studio decided several months ago to dramatize the establishment of Boys Town, with Spencer Tracy taking the part of Father Flanagan, Mickey Rooney playing one of the boys, and Judy Garland, the girl with whom he eventually fell in love. M. G. M. made a substantial donation to Father Flanagan's work, though he would have been glad to co-operate gratis. Two weeks ago Director Norman Taurog went to survey the establishment in Nebraska.

Taurog, Hollywood's ace director of child actors, met all of the 200 boys in Boys Town, and told Father Flanagan that of all its citizens, he thought James and Andrew would make the best movie performers. Would Father Flanagan let them come to Hollywood for a few weeks?

The priest answered that by bringing them here himself. While James played with a Mickey Mouse wristwatch Taurog presented him, and Andrew admired his gold signet ring, Father Flanagan told of their regeneration.

Found by Red Cross.

"They were little hill billies," he said. "The Red Cross found them in a squalid mountain cabin. Their father spent most of his time in jail for drunkenness. Their mother treated them none too well. They were undernourished, profane, bad little boys—and they were headed for a life of illiteracy.

"The Red Cross workers took them away from their parents and sent them to Boys Town. Eight months there has turned them into children of whom anyone would be proud."

The story of Father Flanagan's venture into applied sociology has been told and told again. Here it is, in his own words:

"I started in 1917 with a good idea, but no money. I wanted to keep homeless boys out of reform schools. They needed not reforming, but homes and good nourishment and love. With the help of good friends in Omaha, we rented a place where we could care for 150 boys.

"The citizens of Omaha raised $200,000 and we established Boys Town on a 160-acre tract in the suburbs. Two hundred boys live there now. We hope eventually to have room for 500. The boys govern themselves. Our town is no institution. There are no bars, no fences, no locks on the doors. The horses, the cows and the pigs belong to the boys, not to me. We have a high school and a grammar school, a theater and a church, though we run the town on a nonsectarian basis.

"So far we have cared for 4,500 boys of all races and creeds. Some of the boys stay only a few months. Some stay for several years. I try to find them good homes, with fine people. They're fine boys, every one, so I insist that they have homes to match."

While Father Flanagan talked, Andrew and James were in the next room, examining a stack of photographs showing Clark Gable flying some of the shiniest airplanes ever built. Andrew said he thought he'd like to be an aviator. James said he wasn't so sure. He sort of admired the engineer of the streamlined train that brought him here.

Gravet Is Victim Of Marxian Prank

Fernand Gravet was assigned to the old Marx Brothers dressing room when he checked in at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to prepare for his starring role of Johann Strauss in "The Great Waltz."

It took him three days to get settled, his wardrobe moved in and furnishings installed. Unfortunately, the Marx Brothers had an extra key.

When Gravet arrived at the studio he found the dressing room in a shambles, furniture smashed, clothes strewn about and torn.

On closer examination, the furniture proved to be "breakaway" props. The clothes also came from the prop department. Gravet's personal effects hadn't been touched.

"Welcome.

"Groucho, Chico and Harpo."

Glen Echo.

Glen Echo's famous Crystal Pool made its 1938 debut to lovers of sports last Saturday, and the crowds were on hand over the week-end to give it a fine send-off. Men women and children took occasion to inaugurate the new summer season.

In the Spanish Garden Ballroom the dancers were enthusiastic over Henry Halstead, his musicians and vocalists.

Visitors sampled the new and now famous "World Cruise," thronged to the Dodgem Rides with their new streamlined cars and had the time of their lives on the new speedy boats operating on the waterway canal, and as usual, the coaster dips, aeroplane swings, pretzel and smaller amusements came in for their share of popularity.

Washington Civic Theater Completes Its Season of Plays New to the Capital

Resident Acting Group Has Displayed Mounting Skill in Acting and Production of Difficult Vehicles; the "Box-Office Champions" for April; Mr. Godfrey Steps Into the Spotlight; an Advanced School of Playwriting; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

SINCE this is the time of the year for season summaries of one sort and another, it seems fitting to survey the work of the Washington Civic Theater in one of its most productive and most successful winters.

This semiprofessional, resident acting group dedicates its activities primarily to the production in the National Capital of plays of worth that have not before been seen in Washington. It is Director F. Cowles Strickland, who refreshes a laggard memory with a chronological resume of the Civic's admirable enterprises, which came to a close Saturday night with the final performance at Wardman Park of the "Living Newspaper on Housing," presented under the title of ". . . one third of a nation . . ."

BELL.

The season was begun with Victor Woolfson's social comedy, "Excursion," which had been done the previous spring in New York, but never seen in this city. The performance was dominated by Harry Westcott in the role of the altruistic Capt. Obadiah, imbued with Utopian ideas and a keen anxiety to rescue a boatload of the underprivileged from the drab monotony of their metropolitan lives.

"Yellow Jack," Sydney Howard's dramatization of Paul de Kruif's story of "Microbe Hunters" was the second offering, with Rudulph Watson as Maj. Walter Reed, and Frank Gaunt, Edward Stevlingson and Paul Walter as his associate doctors in the fight against yellow fever. This was an artistic, but not a box-office, success.

Andre Obey's fantastic comedy-drama of "Noah" was next and was principally notable for the fine performance of Denis Connell in the title role—not for the integrity or conviction of the play. This offering was directed by Charles Dillon.

As an extra play, staged for the benefit of the Civic's workshop exchequer, "George and Margaret," by Gerald Savory, was presented next, with Maud Howell Smith and Mr. Strickland himself in the foremost roles, supported by an especially clever portrayal by Selma Klein. It was in this play, too, that it was demonstrated that as actors, newspaper columnists usually are good newspaper columnists!

Paul Green's "Johnny Johnson," next on the roster, was one of the most successful novelties of the Civic's season, with Harrison Libbey in the name part and a musical background by Kurt Weill. The season came to an end, as already stated, with an exceptionally well-done interpretation of one of the most intricate and most populous plays of the year, the aforementioned ". . . one third of a nation . . ."

"Johnny Johnson" and ". . . one third of a nation . . ." marked the box-office peaks of the Civic Theater's year of conscientious, courageous and altogether commendable effort. To the best of my knowledge and belief there was not a play on the season's schedule that ever had been seen on the professional stage in Washington. Insofar as the Capital was concerned, each was in the nature of a "premiere."

Next to the touring road attractions playing the National Theater, the Washington Civic Theater easily comes first in its devotion to the best in the living drama. It deserves the support of every resident theatergoer.

It should be remarked, in passing, that this season's productions at Wardman Park raised the Civic Theater to within striking distance of Broadway in the matter of stage settings and investiture. William M. Girvan's stage dressings invariably were in good taste and in complete consonance with the spirit of the play they embellished. Frequently during the season they were greeted by a volume of applause almost equal to that accorded the actors. Incidentally, Lee D. Butler has been president of the board of governors of the Civic Theater since the time of its organization and has guided its destinies judiciously.

The six "Box-Office Champions for April," computed in the May 28 issue of the Motion Picture Herald from bona fide key city box-office statements covering the entire country, look considerably more like champions than some of the pictures that were included in the March list of eight box-office winners.

This latest compilation discloses public favor, as expressed at the ticket wickets, to have bestowed its largesse upon these releases: "The Adventures of Marco Polo"—now on view at Loew's Palace—"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "The Girl of the Golden West," "In Old Chicago," "Mad About Music" and "Test Pilot," playing a repeat engagement this week at the Columbia. The only entry held over from the March roll of champions is "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer."

These "money ratings" break down into two doubles and two singles for the producing companies, United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer having two each on the list and Twentieth-Century Fox and Universal one each. Well, that's the way it goes.

Tomorrow night's 9 o'clock performance of Abe Lyman's California Revue, on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater, will be dedicated to Master Arthur Godfrey, the local broadcaster who is apt to bob up on anybody's stage at almost any time. While Art is known chiefly for his matutinal ebullitions through the loudspeakers—you don't have to turn them on!—it seems that he also is a tunesmith of parts with several lilting compositions to his credit, if that is what it is. The best of these is an item called "Pale Potomac Moon," which will be featured in a special arrangement by the Lyman Californians tomorrow night, with Master Godfrey on deck to bask in whatever reflected glory may accrue from that lunar pallidness. Mr. Lyman even has gone so far as to say that he will include this number in one of his early cross-country broadcasts and surmises that it soon will be in the hit class. Art has been there for quite a while now.

Theresa Helburn, director of the Bureau of New Plays, announces that the bureau's advanced practical course in playwriting will begin early in September and will be conducted by John Gassner, critic, author and lecturer; Lee Strasberg, director of "Men in White," "Johnny Johnson," "All the Living" and other successful productions, and Cheryl Crawford, producer, and one of the founders of the Group Theater.

The nucleus of the class will consist of certain of the award winners in the Bureau's last two competitions and the remaining members will be chosen on the basis of exceptional merit and recommendation.

The advisory council of the Bureau of New Plays is composed of Walter Prichard Eaton, of Yale Uuniversity; Frederick H. Koch, of the University of North Carolina, and Kenneth Rowe, of the University of Michigan. The bureau is sponsored by seven of the major motion picture producing companies as a source of new writing talent—Columbia Pictures, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO-Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and the Warner Brothers. That ought to be good enough.

Charles Starrett's latest Western drama for Columbia, now in work, which was tentatively entitled "Singing Guns," will be released as "South of Arizona." Iris Meredith is the star's leading woman and the "Sons of the Pioneers," who furnish the music and songs, are featured. Sam Nelson is directing. It was nice of the director to name himself after Sam Galanty, Washington division manager for Columbia Pictures, and me!

Combine Charity.

Kay Francis and her fiance, Erik Barnekow, are going to combine and organize charities each has been conducting separately for some years. Kay's concern stage and film people mostly, the Baron's folks in aviation circles. He's wealthy, a stock exchange member and heavy in aviation interests, besides which he's starting a local plane manufacturing plant before long.

Where's Little Eva?

Frank McHugh, comedian, is planning a canine "Uncle Tom's Cabin." McHugh has a spaniel named Topsy and will name subsequent additions to the McHugh kennels after the leading characters in the Harriet Beecher Stowe story. The canine christenings are presided over by the McHugh children, Peter, Susan and Michael.

On Their Way to Local Theaters

The Post's New Yorker

New York's private schools will gang up on Mayor LaGuardia, who, despite the Court of Appeals decision, ordered free bus service for parochial schools. The private schools will demand similar service . . . James Marshall, president of the Board of Education, will disregard the Mayor's edict, and will abide by the Court of Appeals . . . Maxwell Anderson, who had been devoting himself to the prose drama, now is writing a musical comedy. Kurt Weill will provide the music . . . Gaston B. Means, who was convicted of the $100,000 Lindbergh hoax, has been removed from prison to the Federal Hospital in Springfield, Mo.

Rudolph Valentino's silent film, "The Sheik," is being booked by Harry Brandt, who issued that blast against present-day stars who are poison at the box-office. This will be Brandt's answer—and he's booked the 15-year-old movie throughout his circuit of theaters . . . As a result of the Jackie Coogan case, New York judges—who have been permitting parents to handle awards made to their children, up to $300—now insist that all sums, even $50, be handled by the City Chamberlain . . . Now that "I'd Rather Be Right" was moved from the Alvin to the Music Box, Joy Hodges has been assigned the dressing room formerly occupied by a featured actor in "Of Mice and Men"—a nice room, but upon whose walls were left pasted a horde of censorable pictures.

Another embarrassing plagiarism episode was encountered last week by a national magazine, which ripped out a newcomer's story just in time. A last-minute discovery revealed it to be an old story by Ambrose Bierce . . . Dick Simon, the publisher, went to France to catch up with Walter Duranty and discuss the latter's new novel . . . Simon, who instructed his partner, M. Lincoln Schuster, to cable him all the news, received his first message: "Einstein's book a best seller, Dale Carnegie still gong strong—also, Joanna has 3 new teeth" . . . President Roosevelt is wearing red, white and blue suspenders, presented by Woodring and Elizabeth Hawes—who wrote "Fashion in Spinach."

An Eastern Democratic leader soon will announce his retirement from politics, explaining that he is opposed to political affiliation with the C. I. O. . . . Billy Rose grossed $43,000 at his cafe this week . . . WPA officials are being urged to forego the production of Shaw's "On the Rocks"—but eminent dramatists assure them that the play will be a hit . . . Sam Behrman, who canceled his trip to England with the Lunts, and went to Hollywood for Sam Goldwyn's "Graustark," arrived there to discover the production plans canceled, and was assigned to write "Cowboy and the Lady." The latter title was changed to "Kiss in the Sun."

Ace Dancer

NICK LONG, Jr., one of the most accomplished dancers on stage or screen, who this week is featured in Abe Lyman's "California Revue," on the stage at Loew's Capitol.

Cross Roads.

With a convincing performance by well seasoned players, the Cross Roads Theater last night opened its second week in Mark Reed's hilarious comedy, "Petticoat Fever."

The play, skillfully cast and effectively embellished with realistic lighting and sound effects, possesses a flavor seldom seen anywhere outside the professional theater.

Dascom Dinsmore, a lone wireless operator, ice-olated in Labrador, suddenly finds himself the host of Sir James Fenton and his fiancee. Complications are added when his own fiancee shows up with intent to marry, and from then on the fun grows riotous.

As the fiancee of Sir James Fenton, Catherine Ryon is well worth fighting for, and her performance is worth writing home about. Against a background of Labrador furs and Park avenue lines, her platinum beauty and definite dramatic ability are shown to advantage throughout the play.

Jack Wilson, as Sir James Fenton, turns in one of the neatest character impersonations witnessed in a long time. Especially in the drunk scene, when over acting would ordinarily have been the order of the day, he displays a sense of comedy and a fine restraint that are admirable.

As Dascom Dinsmore, the lone and lorne wireless Jonney, Dave Kaigler is a definite addition to the list of those who have made the role successful on stage and screen. With a contagous smile, he plays a difficult role with ease and naturalness.

Ethel McKeon plays with effectiveness the poisonous beauty. She moves with unstudied grace and her voice has a deep, vibrent quality well suited to the character she portrays.

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 30.—For once Hollywood rolled out the red plush carpet for the right person. Of course it was for Irving Berlin and the movie, "Alexander's Ragtime Band." He has done for song and swing what George Washington did for our country. He's the cream in your coffee, the buzz of the bees, the lullaby for your baby, the tickle for your toes and the heart in your love song.

During the war, doughboys marched, fought and bled to Berlin—first name Irving. Everyone has written of Napoleon. Here's one without pomp, braggadocio or ceremony.

Alice Faye's down-to-earth quality in "Alexander's Ragtime Band" revealed an emotional depth I didn't know she possessed. Tyrone Power, Don Ameche and Ethel Merman made a threesome hard to beat anywhere. I wanted more of Dopey, who struggled terrifically getting into a homemade sweater, which was big enough for a sock—I don't mean on the jaw. That's what we should have had for knitting them. Wally Vernon deserved a bigger part. In fact there wasn't a bad performance.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band" is more than a picture, it's a song cycle. I'd use epic, but that word's been so worn down it looks like ipecac.

A Real Top Hat Preview.

This was our first Top Hat preview, with all the trimmings. Spotlights turned night into day. Oversized furs on undersized bodies, trailing orchids from chin to knees. Cheers from the populace for their favorites. Fashion parade in swing time to a special orchestra in the forecourt of the Carthay Circle Theater. Yes, Hollywood gave itself a night. All for Irving Berlin—a little waiter boy, who sang himself from rags to riches, the wonder of it all still shining in his eyes.

Then on to the Troc and other night spots, where songs were sung but not by singers. Jack Benny showed Tyrone Power how not to play the fiddle. In fact, everyone who could do something did. Those who couldn't, helped. Jimmy Stewart wished he had brought along his accordion but it wouldn't have matched Merle Oberon's dress. Mrs. Sam Goldwyn was as pretty as a stick of peppermint candy. She's one wife who drives her husband to the studio every day—a nice old-fashioned custom.

Paulette Goddard might have been a daguerreotype of her grandmother. Long, tight, gray white satin, pleated ruffle at the bottom and double-breasted Eton jacket of wine colored velvet. Hair slicked up, ends curled on top. Virginia Bruce in chartreuse satin, chinchilla wrap, caught the eye and held it. Helen Wesley got as much attention as the young 'uns.

But this party lacked the intimacy of one Irving Berlin attended in Miami Beach a few years back. He had just finished "Lazy," and that night dined at the Bernard Gimbles. After dinner he taught us the words and music. Those grouped about the piano were: Arthur Brisbane, Julius Fleischman, Marc Connolly, John Charles Thomas and George MacDonald, who's given so much and of himself to the Catholic Church. All left singing "Lazy," hoping the time would soon come when they could not only sing it, but be it, too.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. George P. Marshall,
Washington, D. C.

My Dear George—Was talking to Sam Chapman today and there seems to be a mistake somewhere. I remember you telling me, George, that young Mr. Chapman would play football with your Washington Redskins next fall, but that isn't what Chapman said today. He said he wouldn't.

POVICH.

It seems that he has a pretty good job up here with the Philadelphia Athletics, George, and he isn't figuring on playing any professional football at all. Said that when the final whistle blew in the Rose Bowl last New Year's Day, after the University of California finished smearing Alabama, that ended his football career.

He was pretty positive about it, George. When I mentioned the Redskins and pro-football, his nose wrinkled and he looked down as if the whole idea is preposterous. And for him, it probably is, George, because right now he appears to have a bright future in the big leagues.

He might have made you a nice football player, George, but I don't think he would have lent himself to much of a ballyhoo build-up. In the first place, he gives very short answers as if he doesn't care to be quoted. He certainly doesn't flaunt his college education. A semi-intelligible grunt is his manner of speaking.

His contract with the Athletics doesn't expressly forbid him to play football, George, but Connie Mack has no idea of letting him join your league, even if he wanted to. Right now, he's very valuable chattel to the Athletics. He's the best looking ball player to come out of college ranks that Mack ever saw, they say up here, and you remember Connis Mack has been looking at ball players for 55 years.

This Chapman has had kind of a story-book career despite the fact that he has been in the big leagues only two weeks, George. He was sent up to the A's by Ty Cobb, who is living in San Francisco, and ought to know a ball player when he sees one. He must have detected something pretty impressive in young Chapman, who played on the California Varsity nine, because he sent the following telegram to Mack a month ago:

"Grab Sam Chapman, of the University of California. You can sign him for $8,500 bonus. Yankees and White Sox want him, so act quick. Ty Cobb."

It seems that Mack was willing to take Cobb's word for it and buy Chapman sight unseen, because that is what he did. The Yanks offered the lad the same price—$8,500—but Chapman was pretty cute in taking Mack's offer. He didn't want to waste any time getting into the big leagues and he knew that there wasn't much of a chance of breaking into the Yankees' outfield for several years—they had too many good outfielders in the minors.

His contract with Connie Mack contains a clause, George, that says Mack can't farm him out this season. That guarantees him a chance to get a good trial in his first year up. Well, he hasn't disappointed anybody yet.

Chapman joined the Athletics in Cleveland a couple of weeks ago and they put him in the lineup that same day. He slugged one three-bagger against the scoreboard 460 feet away, and showed signs of being a sound hitter. In the outfield, he has the earmarks of a big leaguer, too, and his throwing arm is better than tolerable.

He looks like a guy who must have been a swell football player. I'd say he weighs in at about 185 pounds and stands 6 feet. He's constructed on the lines of Ben Chapman, a bit bigger perhaps, and he bears a marked facial resemblance to Chapman, too.

What they like about him up here, George, is that he looks like a natural ballplayer. His actions out there are surprising for a fellow who never played anything but college ball. His outfielding is in a great degree instinctive and he isn't any sucker up there at the plate.

He's a right-handed hitter, you know, and they're scarce. Another surprising thing about him is that he doesn't go for those sucker pitches—the low ones outside and the high ones inside. He makes those pitches come in there for him. And he's apt to knock the daylights out of the ball anytime he swings.

That home run he socked in the first game today was no duty peck, George. It was really kissed. Two men on base and a stiff gale blowing toward the plate, but Chapman smacked one of Weaver's pitches on the top of the roof in left centerfield.

Of course, George, he may be a flash in the pan, in which case he may reconsider your football proposition, but I wouldn't count on that. Honest, I wouldn't

Ott's Wild Throw Loses Nightcap, After Jim Turner Wins 1st.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 30.—Boston's hustling Bees today handed the league champion New York Giants a double shutout, taking the holiday double-header, 6 to 0 and 1 to 0, before a crowd of 41,036, the largest to see a ball game in Boston in two years.

After Milkman Jim Turner set the Giants down with nine hits in the opener, Deacon Danny Mcfayden hurled a brilliant three-hitter against Hal Schumacher, who himself yielded only four.

The last one against Prince Hal, however, was a clean single to right in the seventh inning by Gene Moore, who went on to score the game's only run when Mel Ott took Tony Cuccinello's grounder and threw it far over First Baseman McCarthy's head into right field. Ott had fielded sensationally until this lapse.

It was the first time the Giants suffered a double shutout since the Chicago Cubs turned the trick back in 1936, and it enabled the Bees to edge in toward the Chicago club in the second place.

Turner, who didn't issue a pass, had things fairly easy in the opener after Debs Garms, who got three for three, tripled with the bases full in the fourth inning and came home on Gene Moore's single. With the damage done, Lohrman came in to relieve Castleman on the hill for New York in the next inning and escaped without further run-making.

Against MacFayden, who chalked up his fifth straight victory after losing his first game, the Giants could get men to third only twice.

Ripple made the game's only extra base blow—a double—in the fourth, going to third on Ott's infield out, but MacFayden bore down and escaped without damage.

Steve Mamakos, the gyrating Greek battler, who has won his last two fights, last night was added to the Abrams-Yarosz card scheduled next Monday night at Griffith Stadium. He will meet Wickey Harkins, Lew Tendler's protege, in an eight-round semifinal to the feature bout.

Abrams, meanwhile, will migrate to Philadelphia tomorrow for a two-day visit, which will be spent in training under Tendler's watchful eye. The retired Philadelphia lightweight considers the District middleweight one of the most promising youngsters on the fistic horizon.

Cronin and Powell, Ex-Teammates, Swap Blows

Feller and Allen Defeat Chicago, 5-2 and 8-1.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 30.—Bob Feller and Johnny Allen each scored his sixth victory of the season today as the Cleveland Indians took the holiday double-header from the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 2 and 8 to 1. A crowd of 38,618 fans saw the games in Cleveland Stadium.

Although he fanned only three batters and gave eight bases on balls, Feller outpitched the veteran Ted Lyons in the opener, granting but five hits and tightening up in the pinches.

Yankees Twice Defeat Bosox; 82,990 See Cronin Slug Powell

Both Banished for Fight; Ruffing Hurls 3-Hit Ball in First, Lets No One Get as Far as Third, Wins 10-0; Gomez Takes Second, 5-4.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 30.—Baseball's biggest crowd of the year and one of the largest in history, numbering 82,990 fans, packed Yankee Stadium today as the world champion New Yorkers turned back the Boston Red Sox in both ends of the holiday double-header, 10 to 0 and 5 to 4.

The crowd was less than 3,000 under the record attendance of 85,265, set in a Yankee-Athletic double bill at the Yankee Stadium, September 9, 1928. It exceeded by more than 20,000 the previous 1938 high mark of 62,244 made in the Yankee-Indians game at Cleveland, May 22.

Joe Cronin, Boston manager and shortstop, and Jake Powell, Yankee outfielder, became involved in a fist-fight in the first game and were banished. Powell rushed to the box after being hit by a pitched ball thrown by Archie McKain. Before the Yankee could do anything to the Boston pitcher, Cronin threw a punch and Powell retaliated.

Both players were ordered out of the game but took up the argument again under the stands. Powell clawed Cronin with his finger nails before they were separated.

Charley (Red) Ruffing hurled three-hit ball to gain his sixth successive victory in the opener and Pinky Higgins' wild throw in the ninth inning permitted Lefty Gomez to shade Jack Wilson in the nightcap.

Not a Boston batter got as far as third on Ruffing as the Yanks drove Lefty Grove to the showers in the fourth to end his string of eight straight triumphs. Seven of the ten runs were charged against the Sox ace southpaw as the world champions banged out 16 hits.

Twenty Seek Open Berths

Walper, Harper to Play at Indian Spring.

The Middle Atlantic sector's representatives in the National Open will be decided at Indian Spring today as 20 of the original 22 entrants will battle it out for three qualifying places to the Denver event June 9 to 11.

With Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro, having decided not to play and his assistant, Benny Loving, leaving for his Saranac, N. Y., post early this morning, the field has been reduced to 20.

Leo Walper, Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion, who has been practicing faithfully for the past two weeks over the scene of the trials, and Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., are favored to post the scores of 142 or better that will probably be needed to win a place. Cliff Spencer who paced the entrants last year; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, and Al Houghton, Old Point Comfort, are also well liked.

Freddie McLeod, Columbia star, who won the Open in 1908, will be among the place-seekers and will play with Walper.

Last year in the P. G. A. trials over the same course 148's of Barnett and George Diffenbaugh played off for the third place after Loving and Al Treder were in with 144. But today's limit is expected to be around the 36-hole par of 142.

Chevy Chase, with Barnett and his assistants, Virgil and Lewis Worsham, has a chance to make a single club entry from this sector in the Open, while Al Treder and Eddie Stevens, Manor, represent the only club with two entrants in the field.

Bobby Cruikshank, Richmond, who finished third in the Open last year, is the only Middle Atlantic player in exempt. Of the five local players that qualified last year, four will play today, Houghton, Barnett, Spencer and Frank Cunningham.

Only five Baltimore players are entered and Johnny Bass is the main hope among them.

New York, May 30 (U.P.)—The field for the Forty-second United States Open Golf championship will be decided tomorrow when 1194 linksmen—third largest entry in history—will vie for 141 available places. There are 29 others exempt from qualifying which increases the total entry to 1,223.

Qualifying attempts will be held in 31 districts, most entries coming, as usual, from the tournament site at Denver, where 127 hopefuls, including 102 amateurs, will be shooting for 13 places. Most number of places, 16, was awarded to Chicago. Although one less player was entered than from the Colorado district, it is far more representative group. Los Angeles, third with 114 entries, was given 13 places.

Bucs Divide With Cards

Win 17-Inning Tilt, 5-4, Drop Closer, 9 to 6.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 30.—A Memorial Day record crowd of 20,352 fans spent more than seven hours today at Forbes Field to see the Pittsburgh Pirates take a 17-inning game, 5 to 4, from St. Louis, then drop a second contest to the Cardinals, 9 to 6.

The Redbirds scored in the ninth inning of the opener to force a deadlock and the game remained scoreless until the seventeenth when Lee Handley singled, moved up on a sacrifice and scored when Stu Martin threw a grounder wild trying to catch the Pirate player at third.

Pittsburgh had 12 runners left on base in the second game due to Curt Davis' fine pitching in the pinches. Double plays with the bases filled were made by the Cardinals in the fifth and sixth frames.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 30.—The Nats ran their winning streak to four games this afternoon and then they ran into George Caster.

That young man, who pitches knuckle balls for the Philadelphia Athletics, brought the Nats up sharply in the second game of the holiday double-header and beat 'em, 9 to 1, before 35,724 wildly cheering citizens.

Philadelphia's largest baseball crowd of the season, who stormed Shibe Park despite the loud display of "standing room only" signs long before the twin bill started, had seen the Nats thump out a 9-to-4 victory in the opening performance.

Allows Only 8 Hits.

That second game was a romp for the rejuvenated Athletics, who found in young Caster an eight-hit hurler. They also found in Washington's Ken Chase a most generous spirit. The Nat's rookie southpaw, who was seemingly intent on walking one batter for each fan in the park, forced over two runs in the course of passing men in the fourth inning, and literally handed the A's the game. Six times the Athletics scored in that fourth inning to place the game beyond reclaim.

It was a day of big innings. Washington won the first game by scoring six runs in its first time at bat. But actually it was not won until Pete Appleton relieved the faltering Monte Weaver on the mound and pitched eight innings of super ball.

Appleton Stops Them Cold.

With the Nats' 6-run lead cut to 6 to 4 by the time Weaver was removed from the box in the first inning of the opener, Appleton took the mound and stopped the A's cold. Not a run did he allow and he struck out seven hitters along the way. Only five hits did the A's obtain from Appleton in those last eight innings.

The upshot of the day's proceedings was that the Nats retained third place despite their failure to get more than an even break. Because the second-place Red Sox were taking a double beating up in the Bronx, dropped to fourth while the Yankees moved into the runner-up position.

Monte Weaver acted like a base ingrate in that first game after the Nats presented him with a 6-to-0 lead in the first inning with a wild uprising against Alton Williams and Bud Thomas.

Weaver Gives Runs Away.

He proceeded to pitch four runs right back to the A's and what had loomed as a soft touch for the Nats resolved itself into a bitter battle. But in Appleton, Bucky Harris found a relief pitcher who actually brought relief.

Williams had a horrible time of it in that first inning. He faced six batters and only got one of 'em out, before acting manager Earl Mack deduced he was ineffective and waved Thomas into the box. Williams loaded the bases by walking Myer, pitching a centerfield single to Lewis and walking Stone.

Then he walked Bonura and Travis to force two runs across and himself out of the ball game. Thomas was no immediate success. The first man to face him, Mel Almada, shoved a line drive into deep leftfield which evolved as a triple when Sam Chapman had difficulty extricating the ball from the A's bull pen near the fence, and three runners scored. Almada trotted home while Ambler was throwing Rick Ferrell out and the Nats and their sixth run of the inning.

Chapman Gets A Homer.

It appeared to be a breeze for Washington at that point, but Weaver began to cause a great deal of concern immediately after going to the box. His first pitch to Moses was a triple against the rightfield wall, and then with one out he pitched singles to Werber and Hayes. With two out he pitched a three-run home run to Rookie Sam Chapman—a tremendous wallop on top of the roof in right centerfield—and the A's had four runs and were back in the ball game.

The second inning found Appleton pitching, and the strangulation of the Athletics began to set in. Striking out the first two hitters he faced, Pete turned in a masterful performance from that point to the finish. Inning by inning he turned back the A's scoreless, never was in danger and gradually the Nats piled up what was once more a respectable lead.

They wrenched another run out of Thomas in the second inning after Buddy Lewis beat out an infield hit and Wright singled into right. Lewis scored from third after the catch of Johnny Stone's long fly to Chapman.

Bases Filled in Fifth.

That made it 8 to 4 and in the fifth the Nats went out and got another run for Appleton. Thomas filled the bases with none out in that inning by walking Almada and Ferrell and mishandling Appleton's bunt, but the uprising was restricted to one run, scored while Lewis was grounding out.

They picked up their ninth run against Thomas in the seventh after Ferrell led off with a single. Lewis, with the third of his four hits, eventually drove Ferrell home.

But those last four runs were entirely superfluous, because there was Appleton out there seeing to it that the A's didn't get fresh.

Chase Loses Control.

Shaw Takes Second Spot, Miller Third

Roberts, driving the entire distance without relief and making only one 30-second stop for a quick tire change and gasoline at 287 miles, covered the distance in 4:15:58.40.

The race was beclouded by the killing of Everett Spence, 33-year-old probation officer of Terre Haute, Ind. Spence, standing on a truck with a party of ten others, was struck by a wheel which flew off a careening race car piloted by Emil Andres, of Chicago. Spece was dead when taken to a hospital.

Spectator Killed.

Andres' car, traveling at a terrific speed, hit the southeast lower retaining wall, turned over three times and came to rest in the infield. The right front wheel flew high in the air and traveled 100 feet before it struck Spence. It was the thirty-fourth death in a quarter of a century of racing at this famous course and was the second fatality to a spectator.

Andres, rushed to a hospital, was found to be suffering from a crushed chest, possible brain concussion and a broken nose. At almost the same time as the Andres accident, Ira Hall, veteran driver from Terre Haute, Ind., hit a wall for the second time in the race. His car was not badly damaged and he escaped injury.

Roberts, who made his first appearance in an Indianapolis race in 1934, won about $38,000 as the result of his victory. He received $20,000 as first prize and the balance in lap and accessory prizes.

Attendance Smaller.

The crowd was under the 150,000 attendance of a year ago.

Finishing five miles back of Roberts came Shaw. Chet Miller, of Detroit, trailed Shaw by 2½ miles. Miller, hanging close upon Roberts in the closing miles of the race, was forced to stop on his next to last lap to take on fuel when he was almost assured of second place. That sixty-second stop probably cost him $5,000, the difference between second and third prizes.

Ted Horn, of Los Angeles, finished fourth, nearly 30 miles back of the flying Roberts. The balance of the field was strung out for miles.

Shortly after Roberts flashed across the line in triumph, black clouds, which had played hide and seek with the sun all day, suddenly appeared over the vast racing plant and loosed a downpour of rain. Thousands of spectators, surging for the exits, were drenched and the remaining cars on the track were red-flagged off because of the risk of accidents.

21 Cars Drop Out.

Misfortune in the form of motor trouble forced several favorites out of the competition. Snyder was forced to surrender, after he was in the lead at 350 miles because of a faulty supercharger. Lou Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., only three-time winner of the race, gave up at 375 miles because of a broken oil pump. The car driven by Kelly Petillo, of Los Angeles, broke a crakshaft after 250 miles.

Wild Bill Cummings, of Indianapolis, another former winner, was forced to withdraw early because of a water leak.

Nats

gan to take on a distinct Philadelphia complexion in the first inning when they took a 1-0 lead against Chase on a single by Siebert and a two-bagger by Brucker with two out. But in the third inning the A's truly got out of hand.

Chase's control deserted him and he found himself in a mess of trouble when he walked Johnson and Chapman, the first to face him in the fourth. He was in more trouble when Lodigiani singled past Bonura to drive in a run. A second run scored when Ambler forced Lodigiani at second and Chase then filled the bases again by walking Pitcher Caster.

Harry Kelley Sent In.

Wally Moses emptied 'em of one occupant wtih a single to right and Chase promptly filled 'em up again by walking Siebert. Then he forced the fourth run of the inning home by walking Werber. He got Brucker on a pop-up but fell into the passing habit again and walked Johnson to force home the fifth run of the session.

Harry Kelley came in at that point and varied the monotony of the bases on balls by hitting Chapman in an unmentionable place and the A's had six runs for the inning, a 7—0 lead and the ball game.

Tex Tavern Wins Pair.

The Tex Tavern nine won a double-header from Eastport yesterday—the first-game score being 11 to 10, and the second, 6 to 2. James and Donaldson were the winning hurlers. The winners play Davidsonville Sunday on the latter's diamond at 3 p. m.

Treasury Loses.

The Prince Georges Athletic Club nine nosed out the Treasury Department team, 3 to 2, yesterday in a tilt played on the McGruder Park diamond. Amiden was the winning pitcher, striking out eight and allowing but five hits.

Dodgers Lose Holiday Bill

Phils Win, 9-5 and 7-4, at Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, May 30 (AP).—One big inning in the first two game and two in the second gave the Phillies a clean sweep of today's doubleheader with the Brooklyn Dodgers, 9-5 and 7-4.

A crowd of 21,364 saw the Phillies break up a pitching duel between Claude Passeau and Vito Tamulis with an eight-run rally in the eighth inning of the opener. Emmett Mueller struck the big blow of the frame, a homer with two mates on base.

Van Mungo held the Phillies to three hits and four runs, all scored in the second inning, for seven innings in the final game and then was lifted for a pinchhitter. The Phils jumped on Fred Frankhouse and Max Butcher for three more tallies in the ninth.

Wayne Lamaster also failed to go the route in the nightcap but received credit for the victory.

Brewers Nosed Out.

With Nichols pitching eight-hit ball, the Lorton Browns defeated Heurich Brewers, 4 to 3, in a well-played game on the Lorton Field. Hutchinson led the winners' attack with two hits in four trips, while Stahl, by getting two safe blows in five attempts, was the star for the losers.

Ross Reigns 3-2 Choice In Title Bout

Champion, Armstrong Ready for Bell in Welter Fight.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 30.—Barney Ross and Henry Armstrong might be forgiven for wanting to give it all up if the weather should again interfere with their date to fight for Barney's welterweight title at the Madison Square Garden bowl tomorrow night, but the present dope is something entirely different.

They wound up their heavy training activities for the second time yesterday after going back to work over the week-end when the bout, originally scheduled last Thursday, was put over to Tuesday because of rain. Another delay would just about ruin the whole thing.

The talk around Stillman's gym, where Ross boxed three rounds with Herbie Solomon and Augie Gonzales and gave them a tough time with his sharp rights, was that Barney's next move might be a return to the lightweight class. If he retains the crown, he's slated to defend it against Lou Ambers, the lightweight ruler, the week of July 26. But there's not much other opposition in sight, and Barney insists he has no intention of quitting the ring.

Ross would have little trouble making the 135-pound limit if he should decide to go after the crown he once held and relinquished to Tony Canzoneri and Ambers. He scaled only 141½ after yesterday's drill and won't be much above that when he steps on the boxing commission scales for the second time tomorrow.

Armstrong, who returned to his Pompton Lakes, N. J., camp to continue his drills, also staged a stiff workout which included three rounds of boxing. At 135, a pound under the weight he had to make Thursday, he looked better and faster than ever.

Pat Dengis Beats Mel Porter, Wins Beach Marathon

Salisbury Beach, Mass., May 30 (AP).—Pat Dengis, of Baltimore, Md., today won the Lawrence to Salisbury Beach marathon, outrunning Mel Porter, of Newark, N. J., by approximately a mile to win the 26-mile, 385-yard grind in two hours, 30 minutes 27 3-5 seconds.

Paul Donato, of Boston, finished third, and Leslie Pawson, of Pawtucket, R. I., winner of this year's Boston marathon, was fourth. Fred Bristow, of Toronto, Canada, was fifth.

Dengis' time was approximately 20 minutes faster than the time set by Walter Young, of Canada, who won the first race last year but did not defend.

Gerard Cote, of St. Hycainthe, Quebec, Canadian threat, wound up in sixth place, and Ray Ewens, of Montreal, in seventh, the latter edging out the veteran, Clarence De Mar, of Keene, N. H., by nearly 2 minutes.

About 100 started. Finishing ninth was Augustus Johnson, Alexandria, Va., in 2:48.43.

Londos' Former Pilot Would Sign Bob Bruns

Ed White, the elderly gent who piloted Jim Londos to the wrestling title, will attend the match between his former charge and Bobby Bruns Thursday night at Griffith Stadium for the express purpose of getting Bruns' name on a contract. He offered the lad a contract several weeks ago, which was rejected, but he refuses to accept a negative reply, and is coming here to press his claim, so to speak.

White and Londos broke off relations immediately after the Greek lost his crown to Danno O'Mahoney in Boston a few years ago. No love has been wasted between then since.

Boat Clubs to Race.

The Old Dominion Boat Club's challenge to race has been accepted by the Potomac Boat Club oarsmen, and the rival crews will match sweeps Sunday, June 12, on the Potomac. On June 26 the Alexandria crew will come up river to row the Potomac over its home course.

Hendrix Beaten In Tennis Upset

South Orange, N. J., May 30 (AP).—Elwood T. Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., upset second-seeded Arthur H. Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., 6—4, 6—2, 6—2, today to win the revived Orange Lawn Tennis Club Men's Singles Invitation Tennis Tournament.

Cooke added his name to David N. Jones, of New York, and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., on the Thomas L. Gillespie Trophy. Jones won in 1932 and Allison took a leg on the trophy in 1933, the last year the tournament was held.

The twenty-eighth national ranking Oregonian started slowly against Hendrix, ranked fourteenth, but soon took the lead and swept forward to the easy three-set victory. Cooke was seeded sixth in the tourney.

15,000 See Races; Break Wager Mark

Winner Pays $4.60 Ticket in Feature; Shot Up Runs Second.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 30.—Canimar, owned and trained by E. A. Stone, ran a strong race to win the seventh event over a mile and an eighth route. The veteran of many a turf war paid a $21.20 mutuel and scored by a head over Lucky Turn, the public choice. Huppy was third in the limit field of eight. Jockey Manny Berg, who starts a 10-day suspension tomorrow, piloted the winner.

Counter Pass, at $12.60, won the finale. Great Gun and Addis Ababa chased the veteran mare to the wire.

All records for attendance and wagering in this State were broken this afternoon when 15,000 customers jammed every nook and corner of the Charles Town Jockey Club to bet $217,552 on the eight-race holiday program.

In comparison, it was "Derby Day" at Louisville. So dense was the crown that many were unable to reach the betting windows and just sat and watched the races. The track opened extra windows and did everything possible to get in the wagering but, at that, some were shut out. The 8,000 programs printed were exhausted before the first race.

It was estimated that 4,000 automobiles were in the parking area and the race special from Washington brought 2,500 customers on two trains. Ideal racing weather prevailed and for the first time in days the track was near a fast condition.

The Decoration Day handicap, the day's outstanding race, went the way of so many other feature events at this meeting, being taken by a representative of Mrs. K. N. Gilpin. The 3-year-old gelding, Frank Brooke, in the role of a $4.60 favorite made good by a half length. Shot Up, in the colors of R. L. Hanna, of Washington, was second a length in advance of G. A. Laing's Passing Sun. Only two others, Way Out and Aufoin, competed in the one-and-one-sixteenth-mile contest.

With his regular rider, Lou Machado, doing the pumping in the stretch, Frank Brooke turned in time of 1:54 and added another purse to the long list of winners saddled by Trainer C. M. Feltner.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—†DRAWOUT, $9.80, $4.20, $2.60; LADY TIMAROLE, $6.20, $3.20; TIMETTA, $2.40.

DRAWOUT, off well and closest to the early pace of TIMETTA, came with a rush in the stretch to take command and win going away. TIMETTA went to the top early and was put to only light pressure in the closing test. COLD CHARITY had early speed and weakened. ENGLE'S LAD bolted into the fence soon after the break, losing rider.

SECOND RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:22½. Off at 3:27½. Winner, O. S. Bloom's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILVER ARCH, $6.40, $3.80, $2.80; EASTER HERALD, $4.20, $3.20; CANTERET, $4.40.

SILVER ARCH, off in the thick of contention, came between horses at the turn to take a slight lead, drew out gradually and held EASTER HERALD safe while under a drive. EASTER HERALD, in motion at the break, was in tight quarters at the turn and closed gamely. CANTERET lacked early speed and came with a rush in the final eighth. SUN BELLE had early speed and weakened gradually. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. M. Knierlem's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLIND TALK, $20.40, $7.80, $7.00; CANYNGE, $3.60, $3.00; HEART PLAY, $7.60.

BLIND TALK opened a long lead and tired suddenly in the final eighth. CANYNGE came with a rush in the closing test and just missed. HEART PLAY saved ground and came with a rush in the closing stages. STEFEE improved position gradually, but hung in the final test. The others could not threaten at any stage.

Daily Double—Silver Arch and Blind Talk—Paid $172.20.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at 4:43. Winner, E. Johnston's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRUMPY, $19.40, $6.60, $4.20; WASHOE VALLEY, $4.90, $3.60; TIMBER LADY, $4.40.

GRUMPY, forwardly placed from the start, saved ground when WASHOE VALLEY drew out, and closed with excellent courage to win going away. WASHOE CALLEY, first away, opened a long lead and weakened in the stretch run. TIMBER LADY closed with good energy after being close up from the start. EDITH WALKER had no excuses. TEDMELIA broke poorly and was held safe.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. The Harpers Ferry, For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:23½. Off at 5:24½. Winner, H. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY'S FAVOR, $20.00, $7.80, $4.40; MISS ADELINE, $5.40, $3.60; ADO, $3.00.

LADY'S FAVOR saved ground when outrun during the early stages, rallied when placed to a drive to wear down MISS ADELINE and was up in the concluding strides. MISS ADELINE, first away, opened a good lead, but weakened gradually in the final sixteenth. ADO was hard ridden and held on gamely. HAPPY ROAD came with good courage at the end. TULEYRIES STAR stopped. NIGHT WATCH was bothered at the break and dropped out of it after a quarter.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:05. Off at 6:08. Winner, Mrs. K. N. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRANK BROOKE, $4.60, $3.60, $2.60; SHOT UP, $4.20, $3.00; PASSING SUN, $3.20.

FRANK BROOKE, close to the pace of WAY OUT, was eased around the leader after running on the inside, took command gradually and had to be kept to pressure to stave off the closing bid of SHOT UP. The latter came with good courage in the final drive. PASSING SUN was taken back after movin. up and closed gamely. WAY OUT stopped after setting a good pace. AUFOIN failed to rally.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANIMAR, $21.20, $8.60, $5.40; LUCKY TURN, $3.80, $2.80; HUPPY, $3.60.

CANIMAR, under restraint while racing forwardly for 6 furlongs, came around horses to reach LUCKY TURN and wore down the latter in the final sixteenth. LUCKY TURN took command when called on and opened a good lead, but failed to resist the winner. HUPPY went forwardly throughout to show a good effort. PORTAM set the early pace and tired. OLD FIELD was not a factor.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 7:15. Off at 7:19½. Winner, Mrs. J. L. Furr's br. m. (5), by Bypass II—Countersign. Trained by J. E. James. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:55.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNTER PASS, $12.60, $7.60, $4.20; GREAT GUN, $6.80, $3.40; ADDIS ABABA, $2.40.

COUNTER PASS, rated while close to the leaders, came around GREAT GUN when placed to a drive, took command and held away under strong urging. GREAT GUN, under restraint while pressing ADDIS ABABA'S pace, took the lead after a half and was put to severe pressure in the final sixteenth. ADDIS ABABA set the early pace and weakened. COAT TAILS went evenly. LADY NYMPH tossed her rider several times and was started outside the gate.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Special trophy play at four clubs featured the biggest tournament card of the District golf season yesterday, with several thousand linksmen taking full advantage of the holiday week-end. At Congressional H. I. Helsing won the Keilty Trophy, while Wallace Luchs captured the Goldnamer Trophy at Woodmont. The Marmion Trophy at Beaver Dam and Kauffmann Memorial Cup play at Chevy Chase both ended in a two-way deadlock.

At Capital, Georgetown University's golf team doubled the score on the Glen Echo team in a challenge match, 8 to 4, while at Manor J. W. Harvey, jr., won the 36-hole medal event with a 134 net total. Mrs. J. C. Dale and George Tew bested the mixed Scotch foursome field at Kenwood while Ralph West scored a hole-in-one to feature the flag event at Argyle.

Flag tourneys at Army and Navy, Indian Spring and Capital also were on the links card, with a four-ball best ball event at Columbia and driving, pitching and putting events at a majority of the clubs included on the heavy day's play.

A complete list of the events:

CONGRESSIONAL.

Finishing 6 up on par, H. I. Helsing won the green committee tournament for the Dr. R. A. Keilty trophy at Congressional. The winner scored a gross 83 and finished 6 up on perfect figures after figuring his handicap.

CHEVY CHASE.

H. R. Harmon and W. K. Kilpatrick topped the Victor Kauffmann Memorial Day Cup entrants at Chevy Chase, each finishing 2 down to par. The contestants used 7-8 of their club handicaps in the event.

BEAVER DAM.

Warren C. Dempsey and H. A. Wertis tied for the Marmion Trophy at the Landover Club and will play off for the cup next week. Dempsey scored 79-8—71, and Wertis 80-9—71.

The winners also topped the Class A sweepstakes, while Eddie Bean, with 75-3—72, was third.

The second class in the sweeps event found Dr. L. L. Levine the winner, with 83-11—72; J. J. Childs, 86-13—73, and W. C. Hackman, 86-11—75. The third flight was topped by A. H. Thompson, with 90-15—75, with R. C. Mitchell next, 92-16—76, and R. A. Byers, 94-16—78.

J. J. Humphrey topped the fourth flight, with 101-28, 73, followed by C. E. McGowan, 101-24, 77, and E. Brooker, 108-23, 85.

Ellen Kincaid, former club champion, topped the women's events, with a 210-yard tee shot for the driving contest honors, 8 yards ahead of Mrs. C. E. Purdy.

Miss Kincaid was second in the approaching from 100 yards, finishing 12 inches from the cup, while Mrs. R. M. Brown was 11 inches away. Mrs. Purdy won the putting contest with Mrs. C. R. Frownfelter second.

WOODMONT.

Wallace Luchs, with a net 69 from a gross 99 and 30 handicap, won the Mark Goldnamer Cup event at Woodmont. The Class A sweepstakes found Dave Ligum and Ellis Edlowitz, each with 90-15, 75; Al Schneider, 88-11, 77, and Fulton Brylawski, 86-9, 77, the winners.

Luchs' score was also good for first prize in the Class B of the sweeps, with Julian Rice, 100-27, 73, and Frank Luchs, 101-23, 78, second and third.

Defending Champion Howard Nordlinger defeated Jerry Brode, 2 and 1, in a semi-final match in the club handicap championship, while in the second flight Dave Legum defeated Joe Mazo, 5 and 4.

CAPITAL.

Georgetown University golfers were successful in their first Country Club match of the season, defeating the Capital representatives, 8 to 4. Billy Shea led with a 72, and defeated George Molloy, 2 and 1.

The Hoya linksmen won six of the eight individual matches, Harvey Johnson losing in an upset to George Keene, and Frank Donohue bowing to Jack Pelen. Burke and Pettijohn defeated Frank White and Billy Houghton, respectively, in the first foursome, but lost the best ball on the seventeenth hole. The winners had the lowest best ball score of the day, a 68.

Georgetown, 8; Capital, 4.

Johnny Burke (Georgetown) defeated Frank White, 1 up; Charles Pettijohn (Georgetown) defeated Billy Houghton, 3 and 2. Best ball, Capital, 2 and 1.

Billy Shea (Georgetown) defeated George Molloy, 2 and 1; Billy Dettweiler (Georgetown) defeated Bill Pendergast, 2 up. Best ball, Georgetown, 2 up.

Bob Effler (Georgetown) defeated Ralph Bennie, 3 and 1; Jack Pelen (Capital) defeated Frank Donohue, 3 and 2. Best ball, Georgetown, 3 and 1.

E. S. Coffman won the Capital flag tourney, finishing 20 feet from the nineteenth cup, with C. L. Hillyer 30 yards from the nineteenth cup and Ed Fox 50 yards off the green.

MANOR.

J. W. Harvey, jr., scoring 72-78, 150, and deducting a 16 handicap for a net of 134 won the 36-hole medal play handicap jack pot event at Manor. Tommy Bones, southpaw star, was only 3 over par with 72-71, 143, but his handicap of eight for the twin rounds fell a shot short of tying the winner. W. A. Warthen, 83-82, 165-28, 137 was third.

Special prizes, low strokes on selected holes, plus putts, went to A. F. McDougald, 42, and Ralph Gibson and Harvey, 44. High strokes, plus putts on selected holes, went to J. S. Ebert, 62; Jack Stadler, 68, and W. W. Smith, 58.

Mrs. D. M. McPherson finished 10 yards off the tenth green to win the ladies flag tournament, with Mrs. Harvey Cooper second, 15 yards off the green, and Mrs. J. R. Daily 150 yards down the fairway of the first extra hole. Mrs. L. G. M. Pray won the putting contest with 37, followed by Mrs. W. D. McCreery, 40, and Mrs. Mack Myers, 41.

COLUMBIA.

Clarence D. Bills, Dr. Paris E. Brengle, A. B. Chapman and H. T. Peters made up the winning foursome in the four-ball best-ball tourney at Columbia, scoring a net 44.

Mrs. Pat Slater won the ladies' putting event, with Mrs. Merrill Lord runner-up and Mrs. A. S. Gardiner winner of the consolation.

KENWOOD.

Mrs. J. T. Dale and George A. (Buddy) Tew won the mixed Scotch foursome event at Kenwood with a gross 84. High gross went to Mrs. M. A. Miller and R. E. Joyce, with 115.

Low net prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. John Bergelin, 88—14—74, first; Mrs. A. A. McEntee and R. A. Weaver, second, 85—9—76, and Mrs. A. H. Kane and R. K. Norton, next, 99—22—77.

ARGYLE.

Ralph West scored the first ace on the eighth hole of the Argyle course in several years and it aided him in finishing among the prize winners in the flag tournament. West's tee shot on the 205-yard hole started out of bounds then sliced around and bounded onto the green and into the cup.

Thomas Bishton paced the club tourney, finishing 9 feet from the cup on the nineteenth hole, with 96—24—72. B. A. McGinn was second, 400 yards from the tee, with 91—19—72, followed by L. S. Beall, 385 yards down the fairway, 87—15—72; E. L. Mifflin, 380 yards from the tee, 79—7—72; West, 280 yards, 93—21—72; D. M. Langhenry, in the eighteenth cup, 84—12—72, and W. A. Xanten, 4 feet from the cup, 81—9—72.

INDIAN SPRING.

J. B. Robertson won the Flag Event at Indian Spring, planting his flag 175 yards down the nineteenth hole, with J. B. Wilson next, 20 feet from the eighteenth cup and Frank G. Butler 50 feet from the eighteenth cup.

ARMY AND NAVY.

Col. J. O. Stegor played his last shot in the Service Club Flag Tourney 6 inches from the eighteenth cup to nose out Commander J. H. Stevens by less than 2 feet. The latter was 25 inches from the cup, including an eagle on the fifteenth. Commander Popham was third, off the edge of the final green and Dr. McLatchie completed the prize winners, in the eighteenth fairway.

WASHINGTON.

John H. Davidson won the 18-hole medal putting event at Washington yesterday, with a 2 under regulation 34. Four tied for second prize, A. G. Dezendorf, A. H. Dinneen, L. Franklin, jr., and R. B. Munson, all with 35.

French Net Team Routs Italians, 4-1

Paris, May 30 (U.P.).—France rounded out a 4-1 victory over Italy in the third round of European zone Davis Cup eliminations today. The French next meet Germany in the semifinals.

Brussels, Belgium, May 30 (U.P.).—Belgium reached the semifinals of the European zone Davis Cup eliminations today with a 4-1 victory over India. Belgium meets the winner of the Sweden-Yugoslavia series in the semifinals.

With

Bill Ackerman.

Last week we promised to turn surf fishing inside out, as it is practiced along the Atlantic Coast, with the idea that "after a fashion" it might be pursued in the waters of the Chesapeake, by those unable to go farther afield.

Thinking to get these notes in between the more important "hot" news, we were, in a way, unprepared for the immediate response for more information — where to go, and the tackle needed.

ACKERMAN.

Unless you are going to fish the ocean beaches, where this fishing is just now getting under way, there is no need for hurry; for there are few places on the bay that it can be used with any real chance of success until the run is several weeks older.

Above all don't rush to buy tackle until you have mulled over the notes and decided where you are going to get the most use out of it, because "heavy surf tackle" has no place in any bay fishing, and tackle best suited, for it would be too light for continued use on the beach.

Geor, indispensable on the ocean front, would be scarcely used in the quieter waters, and even then complete equipment isn't necessary to get started—and then buy the accessories as you feel their need.

So that you get a complete picture of this phase of the game—we'll give it to you for the beach, and later adapt it to our close-by waters.

• • • •

The list of the needs for completely equipped surfman will be found in most anglers' kits, if you don't count the rod and reel. Two to three-hundred yards of 9-thread line, an assortment of barrel, snap and three-way swivels, the same for hooks, with a book to hold them; leaders, both wire and gut, and sinkers of the pyramid type. A leather rod belt, a surf spike, a light folding chair, shoulder bag and hip boots if you don't like to get wet.

A small tool kit should include a small wesstone, nippers, screwdriver, oil and first-aid kit. A good knife with belt sheath and a bait box with belt loops, and you are ready to go.

Quite a list, if you have never used one of the small shoulder bags, and know how many additional items may be carried if you care to, even to a small tackle box. Although many use one, we prefer making rolls, such as tools come in.

The rod is different from any you have ever used in boat or stream, but most everyone has seen them in tackle stores. There is no set rule as to length of either tip or butt, but a large man can use, not only a longer tip, but a longer butt, than can a small man. Sizes given here are for average height and reach.

Tip (in one piece), 6 to 6½ feet long, and preferably a good grade of split bamboo. It should have plenty of spring, for this is where the action is, and not in the butt as so many believe, but not enough to make the action "loggy," unless you are fishing extremely light line—but that comes later. In weight, somewhere between 8 and 13 ounces. The former for 6 and 9-thread line, the heavier ones for 12-to-18-thread.

The butt should not be to thin or springy, as so many are, but solid, from 26 to 30 inches long, and if it has gripa, 18 to 20 inches between them.

The reel should be a 250 to 300 yard free spool, and as light as is consistent with quality. Fishing extremely light line, a star drag is necessary, for a light setting is the only way the strike of a fish can be taken without breaking the line.

Anglers have available this season for the first time, a new reel, manufactured by the Ocean City Manufacturing Co., made expressly for the surfman, called the Far Kast. It not only gives the tyro greater distance, but the "automatic thumbing" saves riggs, burned thumbs and prevents back lashes. We recommend it as the ultimate in present-day reels. George Emmons will be more than glad to show you one and explain its other merits, at Fries, Beale & Sharpe, on Tenth street.

One don't of surf fishing you can't ignore and get away with—don't let your reel lay on the sand, for one small grain can wreck a fine one in short order. It is always advisable to take them apart after reach trip, clean well and repack with petroleum as well as oil the bearings.

The line of the surfman runs anywhere from Barbours number 30 cotton thread to 36 and 48 thread cuttyhunk. Experience is the only guage to know just which you prefer. Our choice is nothing over 9-thread for the general run of fishing, even lighter for the smaller fish. Ashaway makes a line particularly for the surf, the first 10 yards of which is 12-thread, then tapering to 9-thread, and made this way on both ends so it may be turned when the sand action has weakened one end.

Lighter lines and cotton thread are another story, and will come later, after you pass your entrance examinations and are better able to use them.

Washington Elites Drop Two Games

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 30.—The Washington Elites of the Colored National League dropped a doubleheader here today to the Homestead Grays, leaders in the National Colored League.

This was the fifth straight win for the Homestead Grays over the Washington team. The scores were 16 to 3 and 6 to 3.

Mel Tarpley Triumphs in Tennis Upset

Sherburne Bows After Three Sets in City Tournament Play.

By Jack Munhall.

Upsets were scarce as flit at a flea circus yesterday as singles play in the City of Washington tennis tournament reached the quarter-final round and doubles moved into the semifinals at Edgemoor Club.

The round of eight is composed of seven seeded players and one strong unranked contender while the only four teams to be seeded in the doubles are resting in the penultimate round.

Mel Tarpley, runner-up for the public parks championship, is the unseeded quarter-finalist by virtue of his straight set victory over Lieut. Tom L. Sherburne, who had produced the tournament's only upsets by eliminating Billy Contreras and Maurice Goubeau.

Tarpley thus joins Hugh Lynch, the favorite, and such other stars as Davie Johnsen, Frank Shore, Allie Ritzenberg, Ray Stocklinski and Lieuts. Bill Howard and Jimmy Farrin.

The doubles semifinals are the teams of Dooley Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny, Hugh Lynch and Davie Johnsen, Lieuts. Howard and Farrin and Maurice Goubeau and Mel Tarpley.

One of the most interesting and significant matches yesterday occurred in the second round between Lieuts. Howard and Farrin, former Leech Cup rivals, who had met only once before. And this time it was Farrin's privilege to avenge his previous defeat by vanquishing the former Navy ace in three torrid sets, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3.

Farrin then took the court for his third round encounter and defeated Ricky Willis in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3. Willis, though he played fine tennis, was unable to duplicate the steady stroking of his slight rival. Willis rallied in the second set when he trailed 3—5 and 5—40 to take that game after Farrin three times had match point, but dropped the clincher to three consecutive placements.

Only two singles matches are on today's schedule at Edgemoor. At 5 o'clock, Allie Ritzenberg encounters Ray Stocklinski and a half hour later Frank Shore meets young David Johnsen.

Yesterday's results:

Singles.

Third round—Jimmy Farrin defeated Ricky Willis, 6—4, 6—3; Stan Robinson defeated Bill Howard, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3; Frank Shore defeated Austin Rice, 6—1, 6—3; David Johnson defeated Ray Sherfy, 6—1, 4—6, 6—1; Hugh Lynch defeated Pat Deck, 6—3, 6—2; Melvin Tarpley defeated Tom Sherburne, 6—4, 6—4; Allie Ritzenberg defeated Bill Buchanan, 6—4, 6—3; Ray Stocklinski defeated Ralph Adair, 6—3, 6—3.

Doubles.

Second round—Dan Garber and Hugh Trigz defeated Bill Buchanan and Frank Shore, 6—4, 1—6, 8—6; Dooly Mitchell and Ralph McElvenny defeated Ralph Adair and Tony Latona, 6—1, 6—2.

Quarter-final round—Mitchell and McElvenny defeated Lee Childs and Reuben Gordon, 6—0, 6—1; Maurice Goubeau and Melvin Tarpley defeated Charles Heacock and Deane Judd, 6—5, 6—3; Farrin and Howard defeated Bradley and Treuthart, 6—2; Johnson and Lynch defeated Garber and Trigz, 6—3, 2—6, 6—1.

Reds Split With Cubs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 30.—The right arm of big Bill Lee came through with its second successive shutout and its third in the last four games before a crowd of 41,216 today to give the Chicago Cubs a 3 to 0 triumph and an even break in a holiday double-header with Cincinnati's Reds. Cincinnati won the opener behind Paul Derringer, 7 to 3.

Lee permitted six hits in achieving his fifth win of the year, while the Cubs made only four hits off Jim Weaver and Gene Schott.

Three-Way Tie.

Instead of a two-way tie in the American Legion Junior Baseball League as carried by The Post Monday morning, there are three teams—Sergt. Jasper, Police Post and Nash Post—running deadlocked for first place with four wins in five starts. According to James J. Brogan, the correct results of the Nash Post-Fort Stevens game was 11-8 in favor of the Nash team. The running score as given to The Post were the same figures but in favor of Fort Stevens.

The Punch Line . . .

By Lewis F. Atchison.

One of the prize-ring's strangest sagas reaches up toward a dizzy semi-climax tonight at New York, where Henry Armstrong, the dusky warrior with murderous mittens, faces Barney Ross in a 15-round bout for the world's welterweight crown.

It's dizzy because Armstrong is the reigning featherweight champion who can't make that weight anymore, and who is skipping over the lightweight division for the good reason that he can take a poke at Champion Lew Ambers on the way back; and who happens to be a reformed "tanker" who wasn't worth his weight in telephone slugs a few short years ago.

It's incompatible with sound reasoning (that merely means dizzy, pals) because Armstrong is acclaimed as one of the sport's greatest all-time punchers, a lightweight with a 10,000 volt shock in either hand. It doesn't jibe with logic any more than the statement that palm trees flourish in Greenland because a guy perched two rungs below on the fistic ladder figures to have a chance against one of the greatest welterweights of all time.

It's as wrong as two and two making five because Armstrong is a "hurry fighter" with an extensive wardrobe of pastel-colored suits, striped silk shirts. He's been eating regularly the last three years. It's dizzy because with all his success Armstrong hasn't had a real pay day, in ring parlance, and yet figures to clean up more than any other fighter in the lighter divisions.

It's "homicide Henry" now, but it used to be Honey Mellody, a fair featherweight with less kick than a cold glass of water back in the not so "good old days" on the Coast. Mellody was the name of an ancient warrior who won the welterweight title from Joe Walcott in a 15-round joust at Chelsea, Mass., in October, 1906, and dropped it six months later to Mike Twin Sullivan in 20 rounds at Los Angeles. He was a better-than-average socker, so Armstrong took the name, long forgotten when Henry came along, and revived it in boxing. He didn't do it justice, though, for his heart was willing but the punch was anemic.

This lack of power naturally meant lean, hard days for the curley-haired, good natured Negro, and a hungry fighter is not one to bicker over moral precepts when coffee and cakes are needed. Henry was willing to co-operate in the fullest meaning of the word, and spent so many nights in the tank he nearly submerged his budding pugilistic career for keeps.

He was regarded in such evil light that at one time a full half interest in him was offered in the open market for the paltry sum of $250. The cost of a few articles of equipment was included in the price, or he would have gone on the block for $100. That's akin to asking two bits a share for General Motors pfd. Customers were scarce and prospective bidders shy of the lad, however, apparently because of his fondness for water.

But a shrewd white man, rotund Eddie Meade, saw him work one night and took quite a fancy to him. He even liked the way Henry collapsed and played dead, and immediately bought himself a piece of the boy. Later events have proved, of course, that Mr. Meade didn't buy himself a nickel chocolate bar, but an honest to goodness fighter whose financial possibilities are unlimited. It was a red-letter day in Henry's dolorous existence, too.

It meant that a yawning chasm within him, called his tummy, would receive regular attention, and that he could go out and knock down some of the bums to whom he had been losing. And, surprisingly enough, he developed his mulish kick soon after Meade took him over. The black diamond in the rough Eddie picked up began to sparkle like a future champion, and to attract attention. The pawn ticket Meade bid in and redeemed was, he happily discovered, the wisest investment of a lifetime.

• • • •

You know the rest of the story, but probably aren't acquainted with the fact that Armstrong owes his success to the fat white fellow who fished him out of the tank and gave him a chance to go straight—straight to the top of the heap. Armstrong has the physical equipment, but without Meade's brains he'd still be out on the coast taking sunbaths in the moonlight.

Meade picked his spots for him, nursed him along and saw that he got his dues for an evening's work. True, Armstrong hasn't pulled down any enormous purses. He really has yet to make a big pay day, but a few hundred here, a thousand there for one-night stands have added up into a fairly comfortable existence. A couple of good strikes like this bout with Ross, and he can retire any time he feels the urge and live nicely ever after.

This still doesn't make sense, though, because Armstrong may be the welterweight champion by midnight tonight. An ex-tanker champion of two divisions, and, if he accomplishes the feat, an odds on favorite to annex the territory now ruled by Signor Ambers. It just doesn't add up, does it?

Sandlot athletes contributed to the city's Memorial Day sports program yesterday with a variety of games on widely scattered diamonds.

The Washington Post Circulators slammed out 20 hits to down the Potomac Athletic Club nine, 16-13, in a free-hitting tilt on the Potomac Field.

Even though outhit, 10 to 4, the Mount Rainier Boys' Club nine nosed out the Nick Bombard aggregation, 4-3, in a tussle played on the Mount Rainier High School diamond, while the Capitol Heights nine was chalking up its fourteenth win in 17 starts by beating Russell Motors, 5-2.

U.S. Being Rebuilt, Roper Tells Loyola

New Orleans, May 30 (AP).—Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, in an address prepared for the graduating class of Loyola University, said tonight there still are "new frontiers to conquer."

Among the 202 candidates for degrees was his own granddaughter, Marie Louise Roper, 19, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, jr., of New Orleans. She was an honor student.

"In many ways America is in the process of being rebuilt and the job calls for many artisans," Roper said.

He said search should be made for "ways and means to profitably employ all persons who need employment and are willing and able to work.

Tenant Wins Usury Judgment of $2,279

Jackson, Miss., May 30 (AP).—The State Supreme Court today awarded a colored tenant farmer a judgment of $2,279.91 against his white landlord on the ground the latter charged usurious interest on a cotton crop loan.

The court ruled Landlord J. W. Copeland had forfeited both interest and principal to Lee Taylor because "he charged and collected more than 20 per cent per annum" on a note for supplies for the colored man to make his crop.

Druggists to Meet.

Roanoke, Va., May 30 (AP).—The annual convention of the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association will be held here June 20, 21 and 22. Roy L. Crouch, of Roanoke, is president.

Second Federal D. C. Loan Ass'n Opens Tuesday

Northwestern of Takoma Park Converts From Maryland Charter.

The second Federal savings and loan association to begin operations in the District of Columbia will open its doors for business tomorrow. It is the result of the conversion of the Northwestern Savings and Loan Association of Takoma Park, Md., from State to Federal charter. As the Northwestern Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington it will be located in the Colorado Building, Fourteenth and G streets northwest, with a branch office at 107 Carroll street, Takoma Park.

Although Congress authorized the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to grant Federal savings and loan charters in 1933, none had been issued to District of Columbia institutions until the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Washington was organized last year to purchase the assets of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association. Under an entirely new charter it began to do business on last March 1.

The Northwestern becomes the 1,344th Federal savings and loan association in this country, 702 of which have converted from State charters and 642 of which have been newly organized institutions. Combined they have total resources of $1,124,000,000, consisting of the savings of nearly 1,000,000 individuals.

The Northwestern will operate under the supervision of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, through the Federal Home Loan Bank of Winston-Salem, whose district comprises the District of Columbia. Howard S. Gott, secretary and treasurer of the Northwestern, was its secretary when it was established in 1901, and Dr. J. W. Chappel, a member of its board of directors, was one of the organizers of the institution. Edgar V. Crittenden is president and William B. Dewhirst and R. L. Houston Jones are vice presidents.

May Wheat Jumps 5 Cents At Winnipeg

By the Associated Press.

Winnipeg, May 30.—New seasonal lows were recorded for July and October Winnipeg wheat futures today in irregular dealings that featured strength in the May option which soared the 5-cent limit. Final quotations were 4¾ higher to 2¾ lower, May 1.12½, July 88⅝@88¾, October 73⅞.

All wheat futures scored opening gains but flurries of liquidation carried the May future 2⅜ cents lower, July 1⅞ lower and October ½ lower. At midsession May offerings thinned. Minor overseas and southern purchases lifted option almost 5 cents from its low point.

An encouraging factor was the purchase of three cargoes of Australian wheat by Italy, but no new Canadian wheat export business could be confirmed today.

The May future at Liverpool closed ¾d. lower, receding from earlier gains, while the deferred futures finished 2¾-2⅞d off. Buenos Aires turned opening gains into declines of 2-2¾ cents at noon.

Cash wheat dealings were quiet with spreads for durum grades a cent higher. Other grades remained on a deliverable basis. Coarse grains showed little change although the minor slumps placed all barley and rye futures at seasonal lows. October oats equalled its seasonal low of 35 cents.

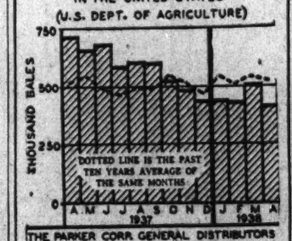
Cotton Consumption Six-Year April Low



Boston, Mass., May 30.—Cotton consumption by U. S. mills in April fell off more than the seasonal amount and was the smallest April since 1932. Consumption in the first four months of this year dropped 37 per cent from the same 1937 months. Cotton exports in April slightly exceeded a year ago.

New Life Insurance Sold Here In April 34% Under Year Ago

Month's Sales for the United States Total $499,656,000, a Decline of 27% From April Last Year.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

New life insurance sold in Washington, in April, amounted to $4,947,000, and represented a decline of 34 per cent from sales of the month last year, it is disclosed by the monthly survey of the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, of Hartford, Conn. For the first four months of 1938, new business written in this city aggregated $19,598,000, which was also a recession of 28 per cent.

The April and four months figures compare favorably, however, with those of other large cities. The month's are ahead of the total of Cleveland and Detroit, but under those of Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and St. Louis, and equal to those of New York. For the year to date Washington and Philadelphia have the same percentage records and the National Capital is in advance of Cleveland, Detroit and New York, but slightly behind Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and St. Louis.

The average for the United States in April was off 27 per cent, but new policies sold totaled $499,656,000. For the four months the sales volume had reached $2,050,647,000, presenting a comparative decrease of 21 per cent. The South Atlantic section is now within 18 per cent of last year's figure.

In Maryland new business for April rose to $7,716,000, but this was a decline of 25 per cent from last year and the four months' figure, $31,136,000, was a 12 per cent comparative drop. April sales in Virginia amounted to $6,753,000, or 20 per cent under the month in 1937, and for the four months of the present year their gain was $27,149,000, or 13 per cent below the period a year ago.

A report of the bureau reveals $1,025 per capita life insurance in Washington, the highest in the Nation, with the exception of New York City, where per capita insurance in force is $1,048, as against $575 per capita average for the entire country. Washington's average policy was $2,648, while New York's was $2,680, with Delaware leading the States with $3,156. The national average is $2,267. Figures are taken from December, 1937, and do not include group insurance.

Norris a Director.

Announcement is made of the election of Richard A. Norris, manager of the Seventeenth and H streets northwest branch of Lincoln National Bank, to the directorate of that institution. Mr. Norris has been associated with the bank for 18 years, being transferred from the main office on Seventh street northwest to the branch office in 1926, where he was note teller. He became an officer of the bank in 1928.

Born in this city, he attended the public schools and is a graduate of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, being president of the chapter in the administrative year, 1932-33 and serving on nearly all of its important committees.

Hope for Fall Upturn.

Local brokers scout the idea of a coming summer lull in the stock market, reminding that the usual seasonal slowing up has already set in and that midsummer conditions will be little changed from the present. There is more optimism in brokerage circles regarding the fall market, however, and it is believed an upturn may be anticipated about August.

Little activity is expected at the present time. Corporation reports are unfavorable, and these have a definite bearing on stock valuation. While the rise is problematical at the moment, it may be expected when the business index presents a definite advance and earnings reflect a corresponding increase.

O'Donnell Succeeds Choate.

H. Lawrence Choate, local general agent of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., has completed his term as chairman of the managers' section of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association, and Charles W. O'Donnell, local general agent of the Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Co., has been elected to succeed him. Roger L. Baldwin, local general agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., retired as secretary and Armand Durant, manager of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Co., succeeds Mr. Baldwin.

On Lincoln Bank Board

Cotton Falls To New Lows

New Orleans, May 30 (AP).—Cotton prices made new lows for the year here today in sympathy with sharp breaks in foreign markets, local liquidation and some outside selling brought in by the holiday on other exchanges.

Offerings were not aggressive but demand was light and the decline represented a loss of approximately $4 a bale for the current downward movement.

July contracts fell to 7.87 cents a pound, October to 7.89 and December to 7.89 or 75 to 80 cents a bale under Saturday's closing figures.

The unfavorable statistical position of the market as a result of a huge yield during the past season and poor offtake by mills overshadowed reports of unfavorable crop progress.

Von Tresckow Heads Young & Ottley, Inc.

New York City, May 30.—Walter von Tresckow today becomes president of Young & Ottley, Inc., one of the leading investment counsel firms of the country with offices in New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo and Los Angeles. He succeeds James Ottley, who continues as chairman of the executive committee.

Von Tresckow was born in Germany and came to the United States as an immigrant boy in 1909.

B. & O. Carloadings.

Baltimore, May 30.—Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended May 28, totaled 34,400, which compares with 35,309 for the previous week. During the same week of last year, corresponding with last week, total loads were 53,775.

Retail Advertising 14.3% Under Year Ago

Chicago, May 30.—Retailers' use of display advertising for the week ended May 21 was 14.3 per cent below the corresponding week of last year, according to a report released here today by Advertising Age.

This report, based on retail linage carried in newspapers in 80 major cities shows a total of 19,606,461 lines for the week reported against 22,867,835 lines for the compared week of last year.

London Gold Boom Cracks

London, May 30 (AP).—A fairly steady undertone developed today on the stock exchange as the result of slackened tension in Europe, but the approach of the Whitsun holidays checked expansion.

Contrasting with the general trend was the sharp break in the Western holdings gold shares boom, resulting from a disappointing official report on experimental findings which showed inconclusive assays. The shares, which hit 22 shillings last week, dropped during the day to 13 shillings 9 pence after opening at 17 shillings 6 pence. They partly recovered, closing at 16 shillings 3 pence.

Montreal Silver Futures.

Montreal, May 30 (AP).—Silver futures closed steady and unchanged. May futures closed out at 42.50 at noon. Closing bids: June, 42.45; July, 42.40.

Bob Burns Says—

The main reason why the work moves so slow on these Government projects is jest because the foreman don't understand the men.

When Grandpa Snazzy was foreman of a ditch diggin' project down home, he watched the men workin' in the ditch for several hours and finally he hollered, "All right, boys, come on out." The men came up on the bank and Grandpa says, "All right, get back in!" As soon as they got back in the ditch, he called 'em out again.

When the men asked him what his idea was, Grandpa says, "Well, boys, this job has'ta get done pretty quick and I've noticed you bring more dirt out on your shoes than you do when you shovelin'."

Joyful Reunion as Child Returns

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Virginia Youth Arrested After Brother Is Shot

Victim in Critical Condition; Officials Believe 3d Brother Target.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., May 30.—Sheriff J. Mason Smith and Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife, pressed their investigation today into the shooting of Robert Brookman, 17-year-old CCC worker.

University of Virginia Hospital attendants said the youth, suffering two bullet wounds in the head, was in a critical condition. Sheriff Smith said Henry Brookman, Robert's brother, had been arrested by city police and placed in the Albemarle County jail.

Fife said he believed the shots were intended for a third brother, Frank and that Robert ran between the two in an effort to stop a fight between his brothers.

One bullet was removed from Robert's skull but physicians hesitated to remove the other, which they said was lodged in the brain.

Mrs. Cochran, Congressman's Wife, Succumbs

Heart Attack Victim Dies Suddenly in Atlantic City.

Mrs. Jeannette Cochran, wife of Representative John J. Cochran, of Missouri, died of a heart attack late Sunday in an Atlantic City, N. J., hotel, it was learned here last night.

Mrs. Cochran, who lived at Shoreham Hotel, left Washington Saturday to spend the week-end in Atlantic City, friends said. Her husband had gone on a fishing trip near Cambridge, Md.

Representative Cochran returned to Washington last night with the body. He was under the care of his physician at the Shoreham.

Friends of the family said Mrs. Cochran had suffered from high blood pressure for some time, but that she had not appeared seriously ill.

The body was taken to Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Funeral services and burial will be in St. Louis, Mo.

Ludger Beaulieu Funeral Today

Funeral services for Ludger Beaulieu, 96, who died Sunday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James P. Fitzgerald, 7730 Blair road, Takoma Park, Md., will be held at 9 a. m. today in St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, Md.

A resident of Washington and Montgomery County for 40 years, Mr. Beaulieu came here from Quebec, Canada, where he was born. He was a textile designer.

Besides Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mr. Beaulieu is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Philip B. Darling, of Wheaton, Md., and Mrs. Rachael Lisson, of Washington. Burial will be in the church cemetery.

Edward W. Martin, Civic Leader, Will Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Edward Williams Martin, 56, who died Tuesday in Sarasota, Fla., will be held today at 4 p. m. at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

A native of New York, Mr. Martin came to Washington in 1929 to manage the Lee House, where he remained until his retirement, because of ill health, in 1937.

He was a member of the Washington Board of Trade and the Hotel Association of Washington, serving as president of the latter organization in 1936.

Mr. Martin was one of the original proponents of an auditorium for the Nation's Capital, and sponsored expansion of the work of the Greater Capital Committee of the Board of Trade.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susan H. Martin; a son, William G. Martin; a daughter, Mrs. Raymond Hust; two brothers, the Rev. James Martin and Francis Martin, and a granddaughter, Miss Virginia Hope Martin.

Methodist Merger Brings Court Suit

Atlanta, May 30 (AP).—Petition for revocation of a charter granted to a group of Atlantans opposing the merger of the three major branches of Methodism was filed in Superior Court today by 11 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

The petition asserted use of the name, "Methodist Episcopal Church, Inc.," under articles of incorporation granted May 20 to G. Seals Aiken and others would "create vast confusion."

Services for Dr. Cary Arranged for Today

Services for Dr. Frederick Cary, 57, of 1222 New Hampshire avenue northwest, will be held today at 11 a. m. in Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Dr. Cary, who had practiced dentistry here for 27 years, died Saturday in Garfield Hospital after an illness of several weeks. He came here from his birthplace, Seneca Falls, N. Y., was graduated from Georgetown University's dental school and later taught at the school for six years. He was a member of the District of Columbia Dental Society. Dr. Cary is survived by his wife, Mrs. Charlotte M. Cary.

Munition-Laden Tanker Blows Up at Shanghai

Shanghai, May 30 (U.P.).—A Japanese navy oil tanker, loaded with hundreds of cans of gasoline and cases of ammunition, blew up today, killing one seaman and halting traffic on the Whangpoo River.

The explosions lasted for six hours, finally sinking the ship as fire crews attempted to tow it ashore at Pootung. The vessel was anchored directly across the river from the American and British sectors.

Don't Be Fooled About Constipation!

Many people, when constipation hits them, just reach for the medicine shelf, dose up with a physic, and try to forget it—till the trouble comes back. And come back it usually does—more and more often—till you get at its cause.

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are just this fact causes your trouble: lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If that's the reason for your trouble, what you need is a good dish of crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars." Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

383 Middies Become Ensigns on Thursday

Other Graduates to Be Commissioned in Marine Corps; Jones Wins Athletic Cup; 2,500 See Color Rehearsal.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 30.—Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the Naval Academy, today announced that 383 of the 436 members of the graduating class would be commissioned ensigns in the line of the Navy on Thursday.

The commissions of three graduates will be withheld pending a physical examination in the fall. Three others must take delayed and re-examinations to determine their qualifications for commissions. Twenty-six members of the class will receive commissions as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps.

Twenty midshipmen will receive their diplomas and the degree of bachelor of science with their class, but will be honorably discharged from the service because of physical disability. Another, a Filipino, will graduate, but will not be commissioned in the Navy.

Jones Wins Cup.

The admiral also announced the award of the Navy Athletic Association cup to Midshipman Frank Cox Jones, New London, Conn., commander of the Third Battalion, winner of the inter-company athletic competition. His name will be inscribed on the cup, which remains at the Academy. Jones previously was awarded a letter of commendation from the superintendent for positive character and officer-like qualities.

The Academy observed Memorial Day by rehearsing the presentation of colors dress parade, awarding letters and medals to its athletes, and firing a salute of 21 minute guns.

2,500 Turn Out Early.

About 2,500 June-week visitors turned out early to see the midshipmen, in white caps, trousers and gloves and blue blouses parade on Worden Field for the rehearsal.

Capt. Milo F. Draemel, commandant of midshipmen, escorted Miss Scheidinger to the front of the regiment, where she transferred the national and academy flags to the keeping of Midshipman Knapp's third company, which won the honor in inter-regimental competition.

Admiral Brown presented 229 yellow "N's," the academy major sports letters, together with 65 stars for Army victories to the athletes in Thompson Stadium. The stars went to members of the lacrosse, cross-country, fencing, baseball and track teams. Capt. E. W. McKee, director of athletics, read off the citations.

The program tomorrow:

10 a. m.—Practical drills in ordnance, gunnery, marine and electrical engineering and physical training.

3:30 p. m.—Band concert.

Rites Tomorrow For Mary Wilder

Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Chattanooga, Tenn., for Miss Mary Wilder, 78, retired Pension Office worker, who died Sunday at the home of relatives in Media, Pa.
